On Your Mark, Get Set ... Go

'83 Starts With A Bang!

Just outside of downtown Silver Spring city limits sat Montgomery Blair High School, a high-powered well-conditioned driving machine. As the 1983-84 school year started, its doors opened for 1,500 waiting drivers fresh from summer vacation. With seat belts well secured, the drivers placed their keys into the ignition and once again the healthy hum of Blair's engines was heard.

Eyeing the obstacle-ridden road ahead, each driver put Blair into drive and hit the gas. As the car travelled on, each road block and oil slick was skillfully bypassed. Drivers came to many crossroads, each reconfirming their ability to make decisions toward the future. Every detour was a possible dead-end; each test a possible failure. As they rode along, the drivers realized they were not alone. To make the trip easier, other experienced people were there to point out options and caution against hazards. Helpful hints and sensible solutions made driving through Blair a journey to remember.

Getting Into Gear

It was September again! Despite our attempts to prolong the summer, it flew by as usual. Time for school again.

Students returning to Blair or beginning their first year were faced with new changes. The new school day started 15 minutes earlier and consisted of seven periods instead of six. Passing time in between the periods was shortened to five minutes. Instead of socializing for ten minutes, we had to rush to our lockers and on to class in five.

Blairites responded to these changes in various ways.

One student's opinion was loud and clear, "This year stinks." Many upperclassmen agreed that it was easier to adjust to last year's schedule. But new students took a whole different attitude.

"With seven periods, you have the opportunity to take more classes that you enjoy," commented one student.

The student body as a whole did agree on one point; having to start school earlier was difficult.

One said, "I just can't wake up that soon!"

All in all students adapted to the new school changes, and for most it was a great year.

Getting Involved

How did students this year show they were true Blazers? A good example was the student whose entire wardrobe consisted of red and white. That was real school spirit! But how most Blairites showed their support was by getting involved in school activities—whether it was attending or participating in athletic events, going to coffeehouses, joining academic clubs, or just caring about their school. By getting involved, many found a way of saying that they were proud to be a part of Blair.

This year, Blair really strived for more school spirit. One of the most successful projects was the Student Involvement Ticket. For $30.00, Blair students could be admitted to all athletic events, and receive copies of Silver Chips, as well as Silverlogue.

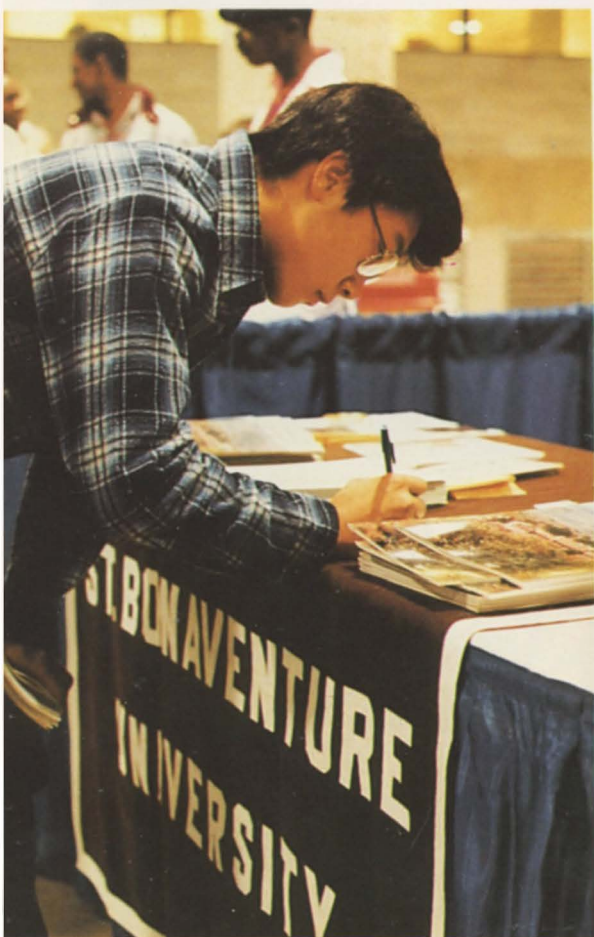

But showing support for fellow Blairites was not the only characteristic of a true Blazer. It was more than the crowds at the football games, it was those people who took part in the many different activities and took advantage of all that Blair had to offer. Hearing about the things they were interested in and pursuing them was how Blazers got involved.

Student Life

Off And Running

The scene was set. It was 2:15 and the bell had just rung. The halls were cluttered with students socializing with their friends. We focused in on Kim and James, who were just one of the many sets of friends talking.

"Hey James, what's up?"

"Nothing much. Sorry to cut you short, Kim, but I've got to get to work."

"Oh, really, where do you work?"

"Jerry's," James answered as he raced down the hall in a hurry.

"Give me a call tonight if you have time!" Kim yelled after him. Just then Mario came strutting by.

"Call me tonight!" Mario said mockingly.

"Shush, he's just a friend." Kim cried defensively.

"Are you going to the science club meeting, or are you going to soccer practice?" Kim asked.

"Soccer- we've got a big game coming up so I can't miss practice."

"O.K., well I'll let you know what goes on at the science club meeting. I think we're just going to talk about next month's field trip."

"Oh yea. Could you pick up a permission slip for me?"

"Sure, no problem. Have fun at practice!" Kim exclaimed as she ran off to the science room, noticing she was already 10 minutes late. Mario rushed off to the boys' gym, hoping he could change before the coach noticed he was late.

After their club meetings and obligations, Mario, Kim and James, just like all the other students at Blair, went home and did their homework. Then maybe they watched "Hill Street Blues," the "A - Team," or "Cheers" before they went to bed.

Since there are only five minutes between classes, students find it easier to socialize with their friends during the extended lunch period.

Working can be enjoyable. Referee Jack Benson and coach Louis Hoelman have found this out by working with children at the Silver Spring Boys Club.

Preparing several afternoons a week for marching band, students like Jin Seo devote themselves to producing the highest caliber performances.

Finding time to enjoy the afternoon sun, Cathy Rogers and Tom Johnson take a break in the quad.

Using the library, Beade Minasse, Evans Malyi, Walter Tita and Kaituta Sikyala relax after a busy day at school.

Places To Go, People To See

As soon as the bell rang, you probably raced to your locker, threw your books in, and headed for your favorite hang-out. Hang-outs were a big part of our year at Blair; they gave us a place to relax and enjoy our free time. Different groups had their own spots, but they all met for the same reasons -to see friends, to get a break from a tough schedule, or just to catch up on the latest gossip. Whether it was the library, Ertter's, the student parking lot, the seal, or the courtyard, hang-outs gave Blairites a chance to breathe a sigh of relief when classes were finally over.

Even the faint click of a camera's shutter fails to escape the attention of the ever present Ertter's crowd.

They Work Hard For The Money

While some students were involved in extra-curricular activities at Blair, others chose to spend their free hours working outside of school. The range of jobs was limitless, from fast food chains to boys clubs, and from babysitting to office work. There must have been a reason why students wanted to give up their hard earned free time and devote it to a part-time job. We found that some worked out of necessity—to earn money for college, a car, or to save for the future. But everyone enjoyed the experience and independence that came from having their own income and bank account. And don't forget the pleasure and self-satisfaction that came from a job well done. For these Blairites, on their journey through the high school years, their job was like a road sign that pointed them in the right direction.

Being a lifeguard at the Silver Spring Y.M.C.A. meant Sophomore Sean Spann had to learn to assume more responsibility.

Originality With Personality

Fashion and prevailing style - that was Montgomery Blair's middle name. Someone walking through the doors of Blair might have thought they had arrived at a fashion show because of the originality and style reflected in the students' dress.

Styles fade, and so did jeans. Stonewashed, pin-striped, and black denims were on display. Either paired with the old favorites of years past, such as puffy sleeves and shoulder pads, or spiced up with the latest "Flashdance" look - scissor shorn tee's and sweat shirts - jeans made a successful transition into the 80's.

Bigger was better, at least when it came to female attire. Oversized shirts and dresses brought back the era of the 50's. Girls grabbed shirts from daddy's closet, added a wide belt, stylish buttons, colorful bracelets and big earrings to capture this memorable style.

Perhaps the most surprising addition to fashion this year was the focus on footwear. Bright colorful chucks, suede boots, polka-dotted or checkered tennis shoes could each provide the bottom line to complete an outfit.

1983-84 was a year for colors and comfort, for buttons and boldness. Blair fashion lovers used these ingredients to make their hallways unique showcases of style.

Blazers Have The Magic Touch

Magic was the theme for this year's homecoming and that's just what it was, a magical week! There was a lot more involvement this year, especially concerning the spirit halls. Many enthusiastic club members stayed until all hours of the evening to decorate the halls. A $25.00 prize went to the Junior class for their outstanding work and creativity. The Homecoming coffee house and pep rally also proved to be successful. All in all it was a very exciting week, thanks to all the spirited Blazers that helped to make it happen.

Magic Fills The Air

The Blazer Magic burst forth with the sun on that chilly Saturday morning in October. In St. Michaels' parking lot, Blazers were preparing for their Homecoming. The band was tuning up, the poms were practicing parade steps, and final touches were being made everywhere. Finally lined up and ready to go, the parade proceeded down Wayne Avenue towards Blair's football field. The parade circled around the track and the football team came roaring out behind them. The game started and magic filled the air, but by half-time the score was seven to zero in Poolsville's favor. The half-time show opened with the band playing a medley of "Flashdance" and "Billie Jean" while they dazzled the spectators with their dance steps. The Pom Pon Squad followed with a routine to "Rock It." The football team returned and the game continued. Unfortunately, they were not victorious; they lost fourteen to zero. But even that did not dampen the Blazer spirit, for Blairites left the stands chanting proudly, "We love the Blazers, deep down in our hearts!" The activities concluded with the dance in the main gym that evening. Homecoming '83 was filled with that magic touch.

Simple Holiday Joys

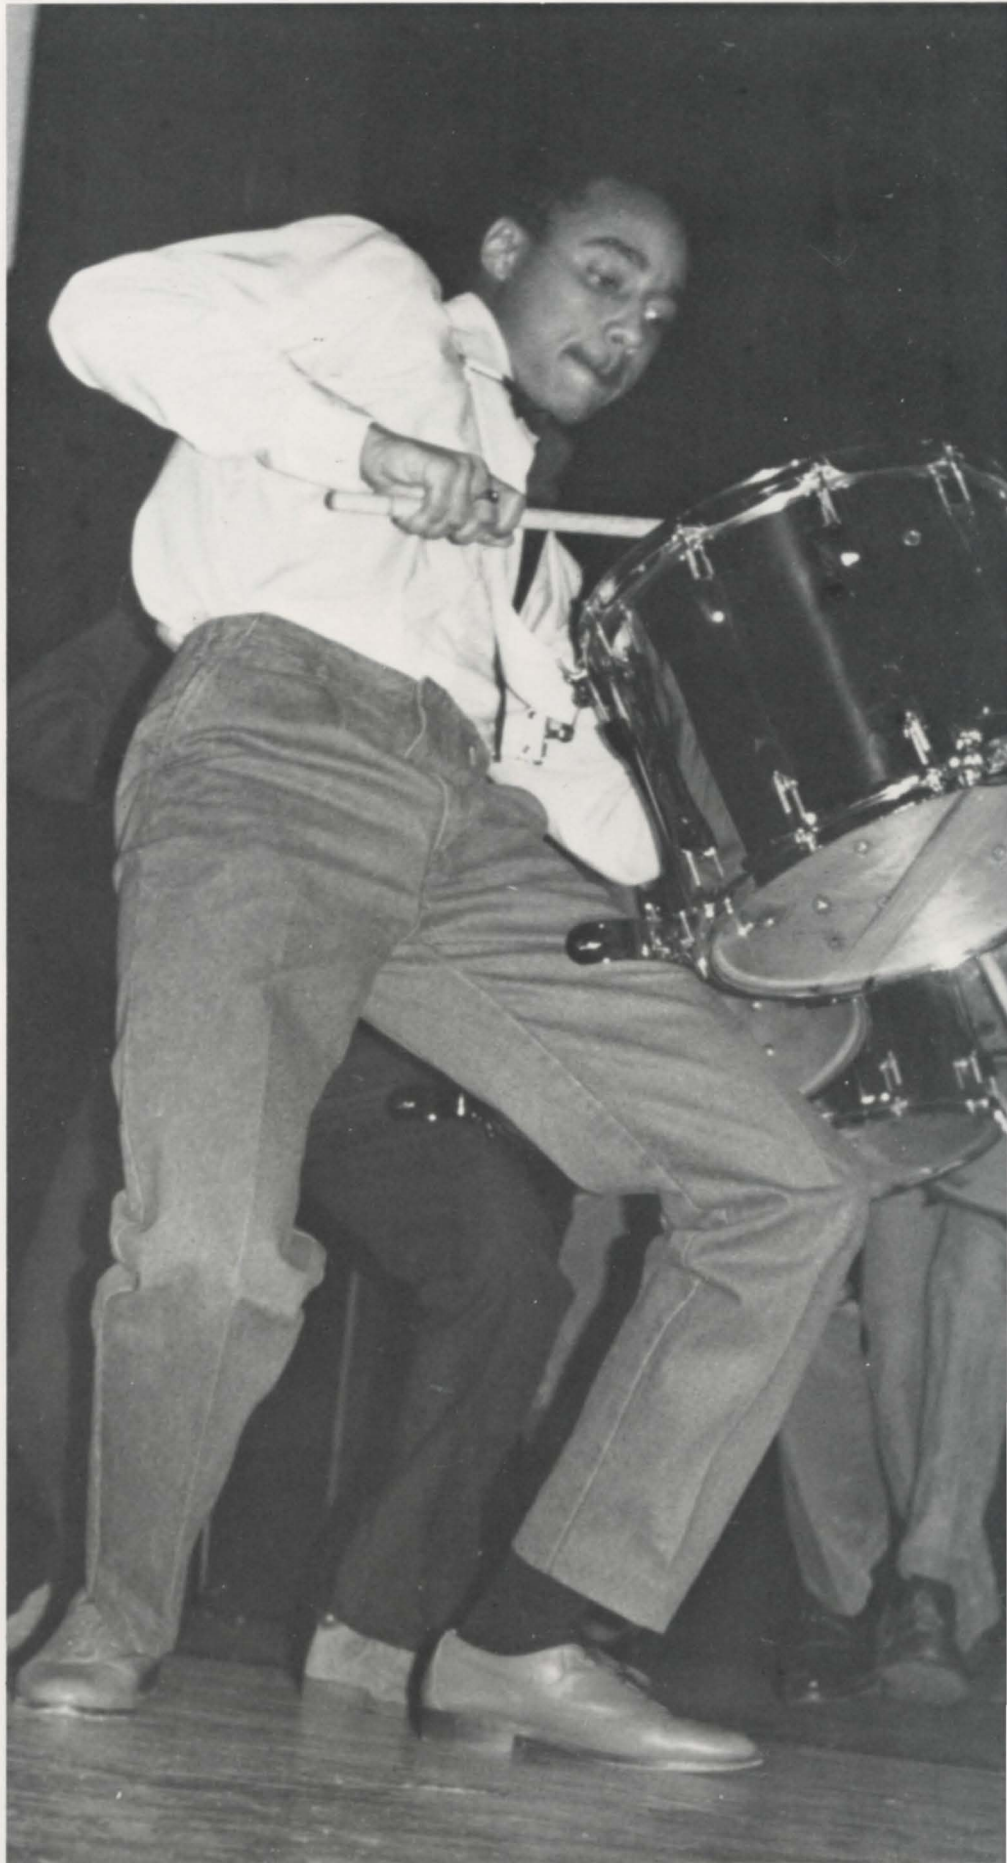

Warming up their voices and tuning their instruments, the Blair music department prepared themselves for what was to be a sparkling performance of talent and energy. After weeks of preparation and hard work, everyone was ready. The lights went down and the curtain opened to reveal the Blazer chorus decked out in red and white. They delighted the audience with spirited songs and cheerful voices. They were followed by the Madrigals, a new edition to the chorus department. They sang a spiritual hallelujah a cappella. Next came the Chamber Choir robed in regal red. Their voices resounded throughout the auditorium in perfect harmony.

The symphonic band, led by Mr. Harry, performed three impressive pieces, one of them accompanying soloist Mark Keating. The band, as usual, did a marvelous job. The jazz band, also under the direction of Mr. Harry, concluded the evening's festivities with swing from the forties, while the audience danced in the aisles. An added feature to the jazz band's performance was the soulful voice of Gina Brookins. She enthralled the audience with her stirring renditions of "Just The Way You Are," and "Come In From The Rain."

Needless to say, the concert was a memorable success. Blair's music department had once again lived up to its outstanding reputation.

Education Is For Life

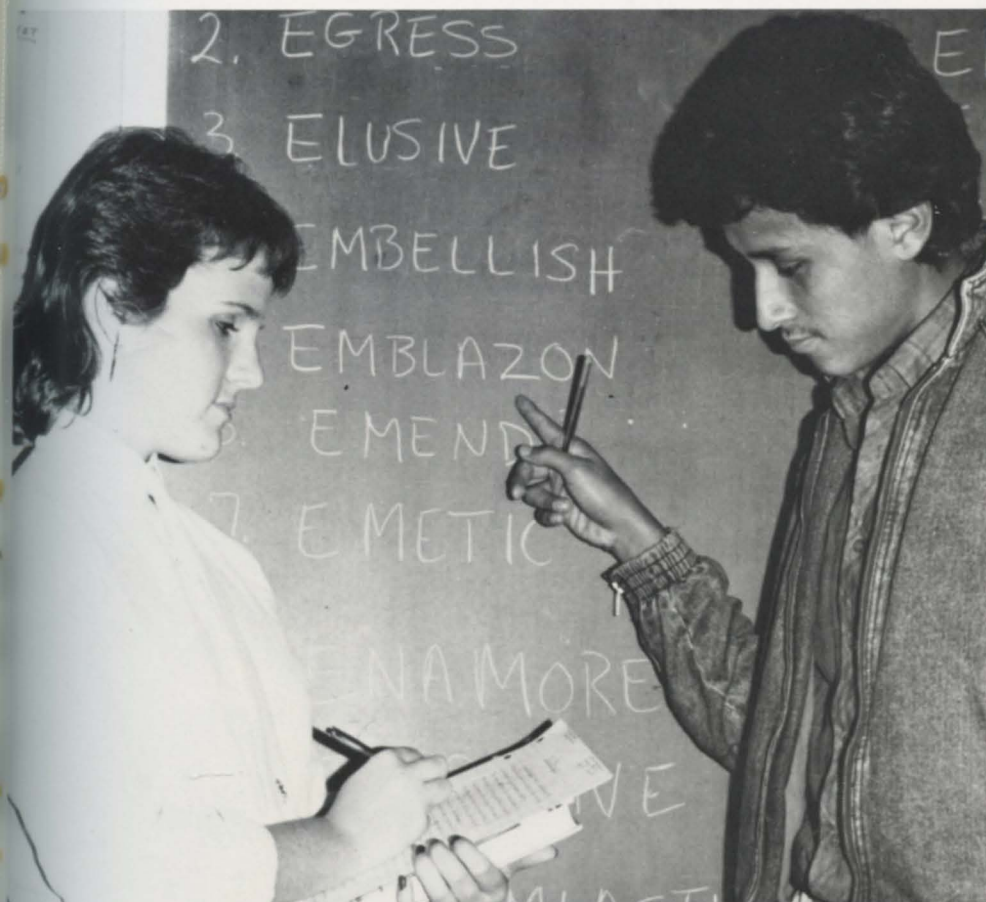

Education at Blair often involved reinterpretation and enriching of personal experiences. Take for example, the train. For most students the train was simply a mode of transportation, a locomotive and cars rolling on. But students at Blair took an in-depth look at the seemingly obvious. In a physics class the train was transformed into an object with velocity and acceleration—qualities that could be computed mathematically. On the other hand, a history teacher would refer to the train as the iron horse that opened the Western Frontier. Finally, in English, a poet might have lauded the train as a majestic beast tearing through the countryside, belching smoke as it went. For Blair students, the train was transformed from a simple object to a complex entity with physical, historical, and emotional qualities.

A major aid, in analyzing and deciphering the complexities of the world we live in, was learning to use and comprehend the written word. Blair's able English staff was assisted by Shakespeare, Salinger, Miller, Hemingway, Whitman and many more in this endeavor. Viewing the world through these wise eyes and minds enriched our experience of living.

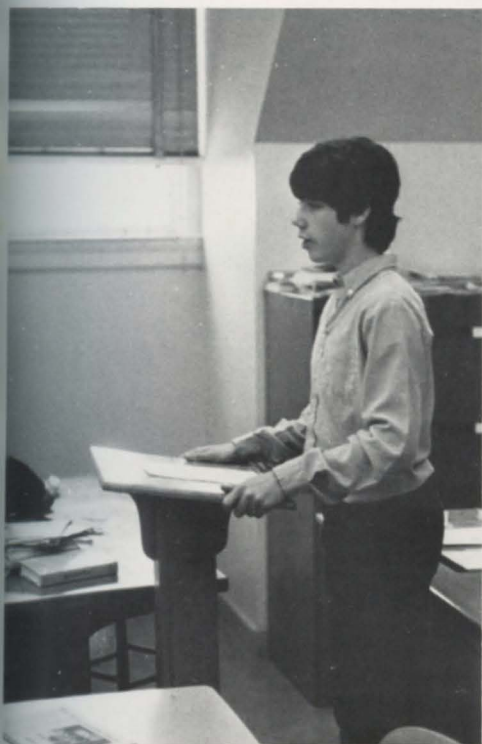

An education is for life.

Vocabulary words emblazon blackboards throughout C- building, a familiar sight to every Blazer. Seniors Vickie Maplesden and Carlos Orbe perform their weekly ritual of taking copious notes from the board.

"Knowledge of a book will last for a lifetime," Mrs. Hoing promises, as a dubious Kenita Johnson reacts with disbelief. Colleen Kaplin tries to understand the logic behind her teacher's statement.

Education Is For Life

Math: A New Angle

Math- you don't need it, or at least you think you don't. But take a minute and think . . . what would your life have been like if you didn't know any math? How would you have known whether or not you had received the right change from the cab driver? Could you have figured out how much gas you could have put in your car for five dollars? Would you have been able to tell whether or not the sales lady had taken twenty percent off the price of your new jacket? Most important of all, could you have calculated the number of school days left until summer vacation?

Math was not only a necessity for everyday situations; it was important for many students who sought careers in engineering, accounting, and computer science, as well as many others.

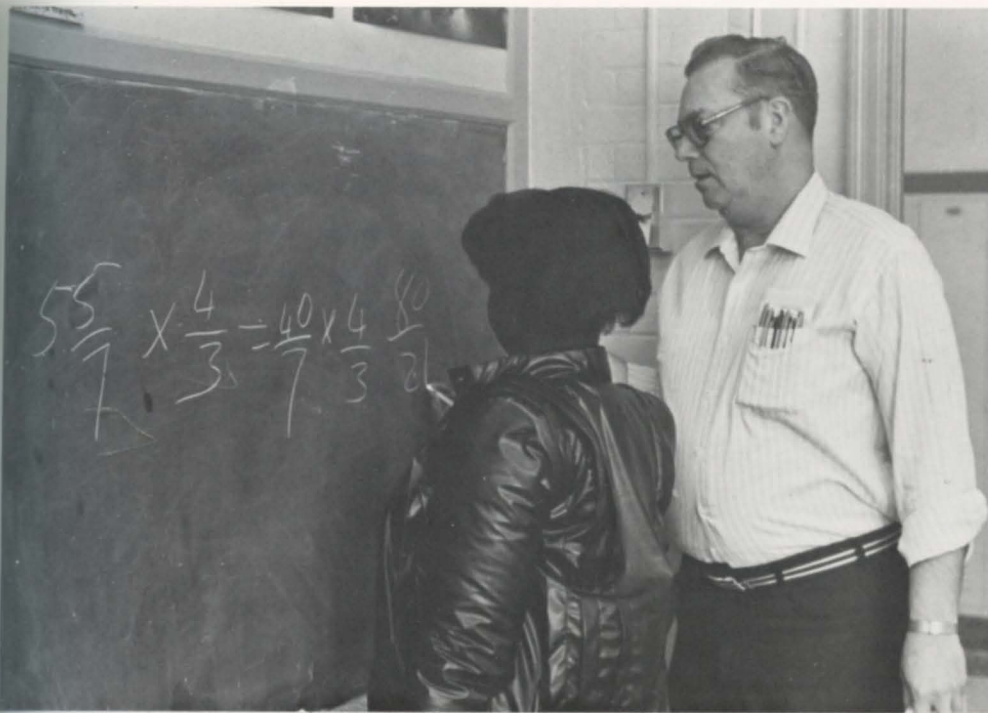

Blair's Math Department has prepared and guided all of its students down the road to a successful future. Perhaps someday, when you find yourself planning a budget for a growing family, you'll realize that your math classes were worth all the time and trouble you spent.

While explaining a problem, Mr. Roth gestures dramatically to enlighten his algebra class.

A little humor can make math a lot more fun. Junior Amy Warren takes a break from her concentration to smile at her teacher's jokes.

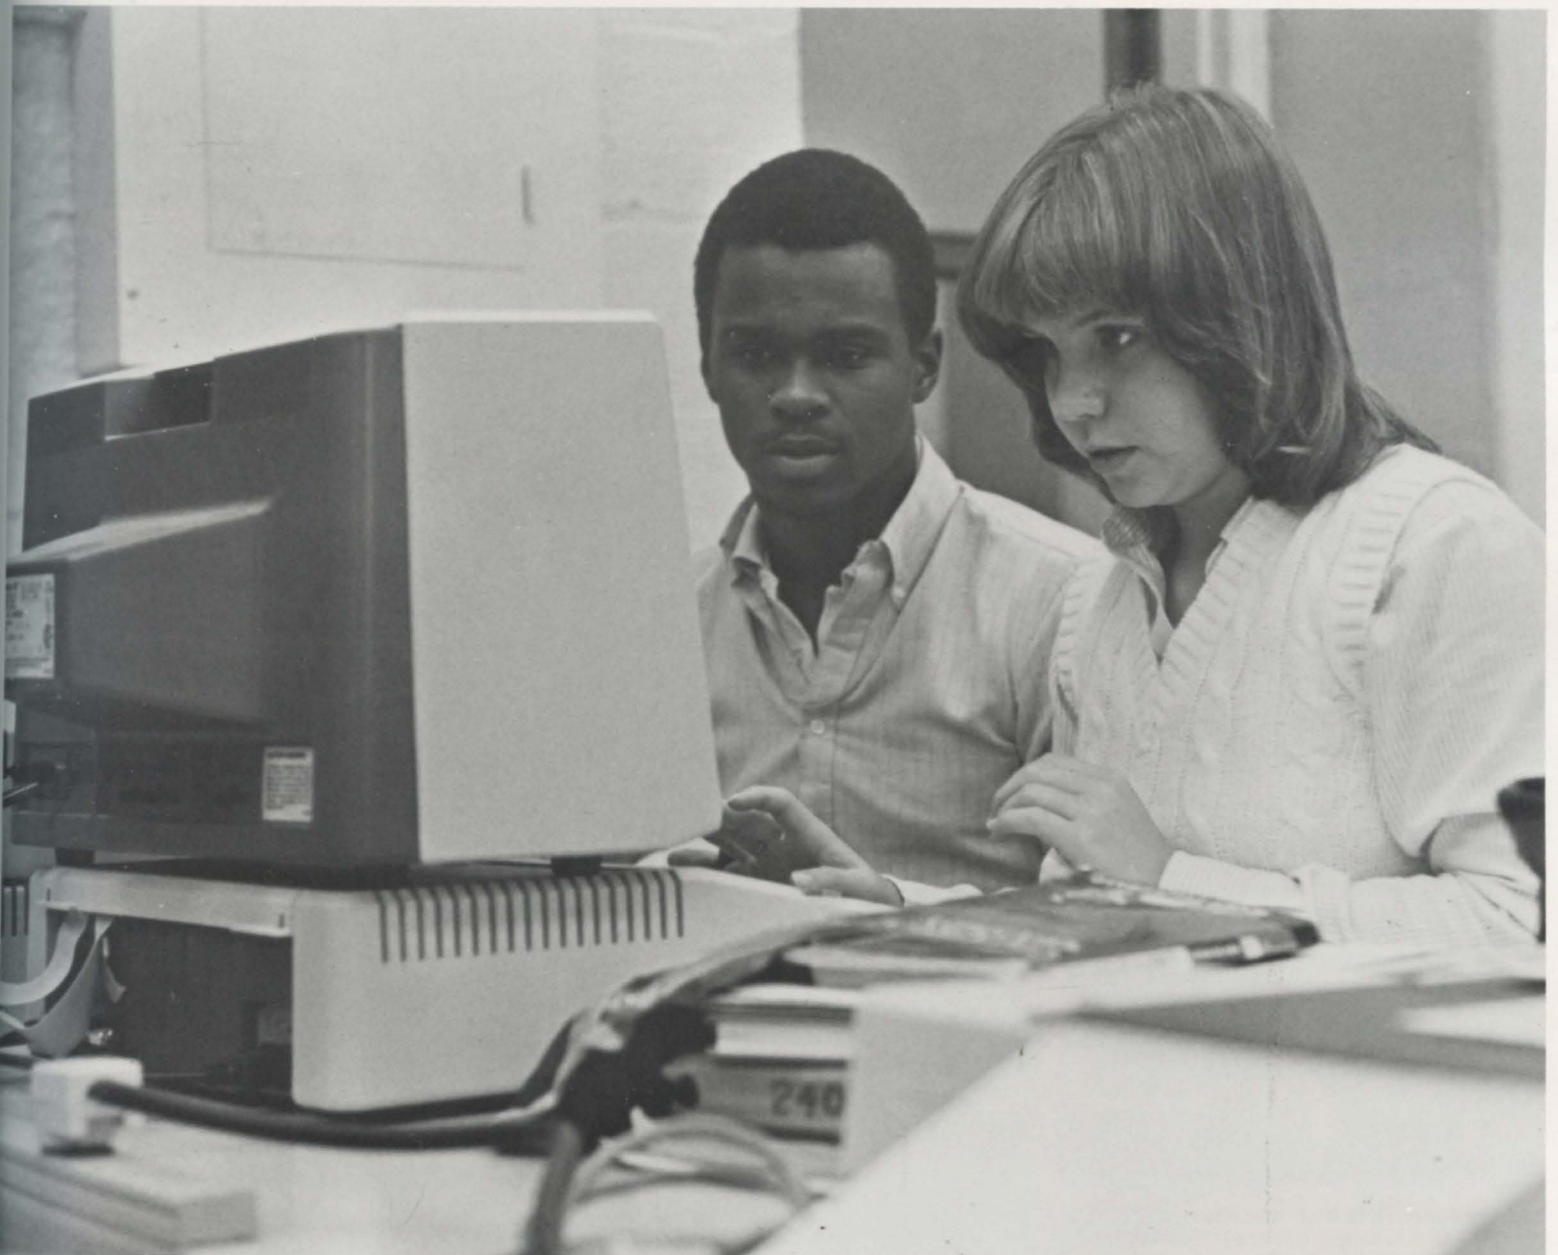

While math may be an interesting subject for J Erin Butler, other students around her do not feel the same way.

By observing his student's work, Mr. Zimmerman can determine the areas in which she may need assistance.

Learning about sines and cosines is a very difficult part of a trigonometry class, but Ms. Bailey explains everything with great detail, to help students understand.

After programming and reprogramming, Senior Deric Thomas, and Junior Dian Levy wait with anticipation for the final results.

Education Is For Life Blazers Blast Off

Exciting things have been happening in Blair's science department this year. Blair was accepted by NASA, as one of only a handful of schools in Montgomery County to send a project up in the space shuttle. Two of Blair's teachers that directed this project were Mr. Redos and Mr. Moats. The student director was Annie Weisbrod, who was working with Assen Assenov, Bryce Diamond, Nick Josties, Mike Seo, and Faisal Kahn.

They worked on two interesting experiments. Explained in simple terms, one was on the effects of gravity on capillary action, and the other involved the planarian. The planarian is a worm which can regenerate itself when separated into pieces. The experiment was to observe the effects of the space environment on this process.

Most students were unaware of all the opportunities that were available in the science department. Students who took horticulture had the opportunity to use Blair's very own green house. A project last fall was to grow poinsettias in time for Christmas. This is difficult since poinsettias are very light-sensitive.

A recent addition to the teaching staff, Mr. Curry, said that what attracted him to Blair was the fact that we have one of the best science programs in the county. Blair can be proud of its science department which is constantly expanding, in order to keep up with the scientific world of 1984.

In the heat of the greenhouse, Blair's third floor forest, horticulture students Greta Kendrick, and Keith Campbell observe the growth progress of the poinsettia plants.

Alcohol production in Blair reaches new heights as A.P. Biology students, Kourtney Young, Karen McCarthey, and Robin Calhoun ferment potatoes.

With the assistance of Pierre Gagne and Assen Assenov, Mr. Moats performs a physics demonstration using sensors to detect the speed of a moving object.

With a cheerful smile, Mrs. Turner helps her Biology student, Norris Bethea, understand protein synthesis.

Assembling equipment for a distillation lab is not as easy as you might think, as Jack Benson, Dina Kurzweil, and Michelle Loving find out.

Watching attentively as Mr. Basgier explains a lab procedure, are A.P. Biology students Colleen Kaplin, Charlene Yim, and Fran Eskin.

An Education Is For Life A Ticket To Ride

Hop on to the nearest form of transportation: boat, plane, train or what ever your preference. Vehicles, such as these, could have taken you all over the world, but the average teenager could not afford the price. The next best thing was to experience the world through Blair's Social Studies department.

The classroom became a window to the world. Discovering a mosaic of cultures in each country, students began to realize that the whole planet did not consist only of McDonald's. On this trip, students also learned about characteristics common to all people, such as psychological examinations of our basic feelings and actions. Going back even farther, students of anthropology reviewed theories on how the earth and homo sapiens were originally created. Zooming on to the 20th Century, they learned to deal with the hazards of everyday life.

Discovering that their world was made up of many interconnected factors and realizing that their life-styles were only some of these, students found the ticket to ride at Blair.

During law class, Junior Jenny McNeal points out a crucial point in the trial to Becky Trimble, Louis Messersmith, and Chris Reid.

Social studies teachers need a break too, as shown by Ms. Diffley and Mr. Bridges.

While reading the Business and Finance section, Louis Hoelman and Karen Georgiev discuss economics.

Creative Expressions

What inspired your imagination? Music? Art? Home Economics or Child Development? For many Blair students these electives stimulated creativity. Although these courses may have seemed frivolous when compared with strict academic classes, they often broadened our knowledge and appreciation for various facets of life.

These electives allowed students to learn how to express their feelings through painting, cooking, or watching younger children grow. Courses like these can create inner satisfaction that will last a lifetime.

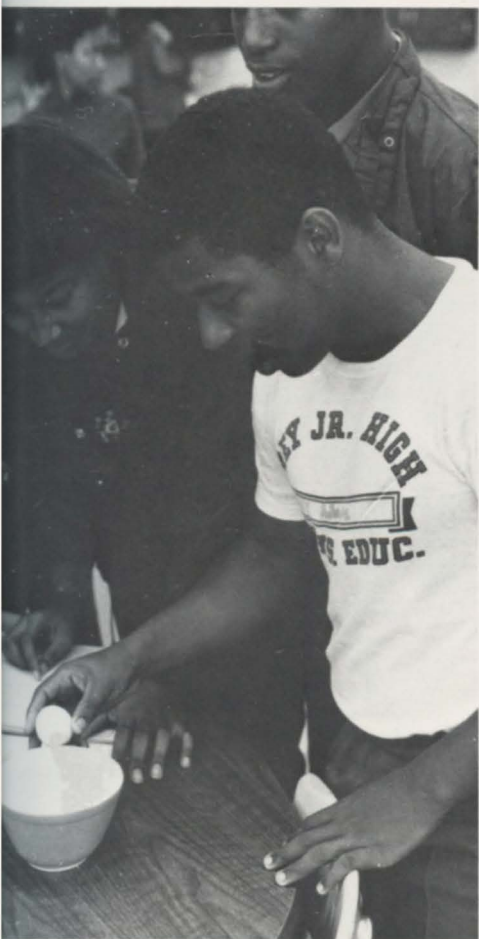

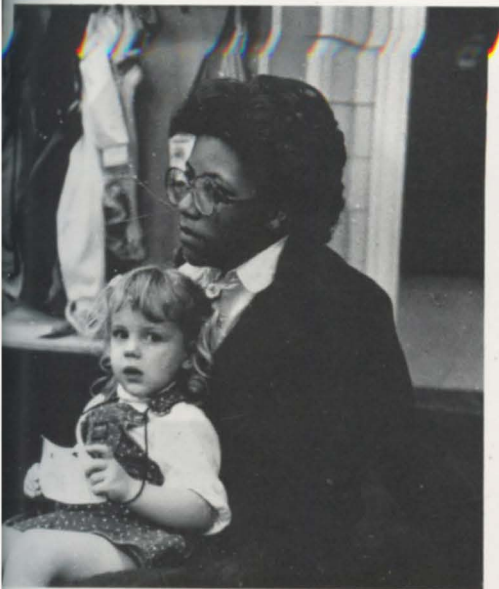

Home Economics involved more than the basics of sewing and cooking. A student could look at the positive and negative sides to marriage, parenting, and child development. This kind of knowledge was practical for both sexes.

Once students discovered creative expressions they opened a new door to their minds.

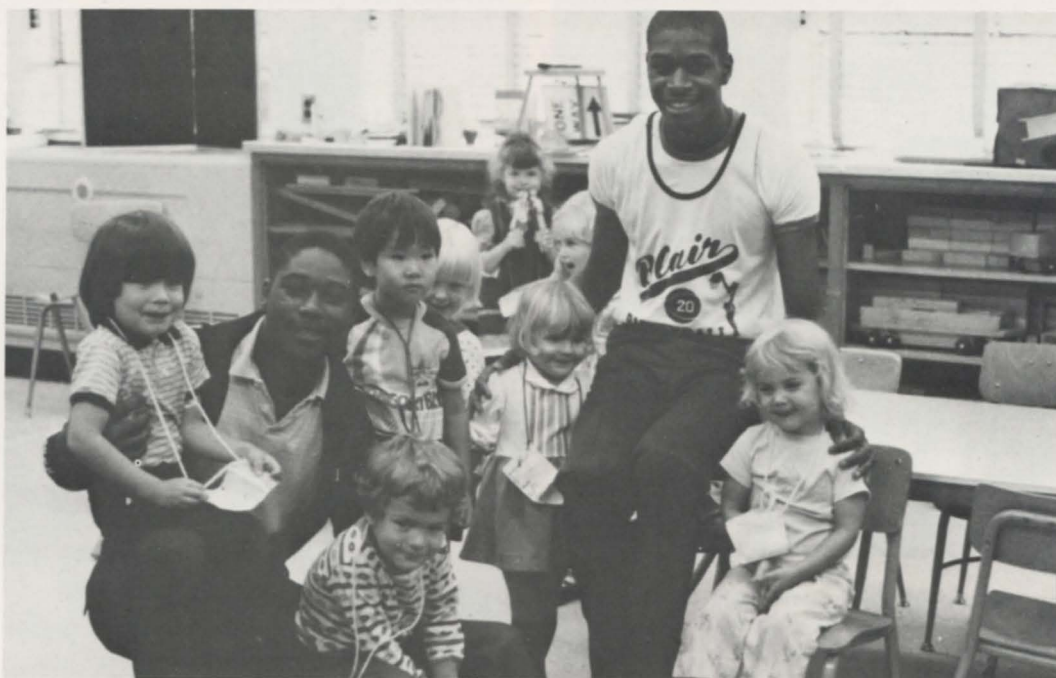

Students in child development class, like Jackey Aubrey, often find time to quench the curiosity of the toddlers.

Many students, like Patricia Moore, develop close relationships with children in Mrs. Swift's child development class.

Practice makes perfect in Mrs. Finley's gourmet cooking class as Deseri Shipman and Anthony Adams demonstrate.

These two jocks, William "Pops" Ortiz and Arnold "A.J." Johnson, not only have great athletic ability, but they also have the magical touch with children.

The Blair Flair: Portrait Of The Artist

As senior Kirsten Pauli said, "The Art department was great; that's why I took so many courses, three a day." Kirsten's not the only one who enjoyed Blair's art department. Students throughout the school used this corner of F building to exercise their creativity. A diverse array of courses were offered to give people a chance to express their talents. Courses ranged from ceramics and sculpture to drawing and design. Crafts and photography further expanded the scope of Blair's creativity, as did commercial art, painting, and Fundamentals of Art.

The individuals who taught these classes were talented artists as well as skilled teachers. New to the art staff of Blair this year was Ms. Sandy Klingenberg, who taught ceramics and Fundamentals of Art.

Instruction in anything from the potter's wheel to the painter's brush could be found in this creative corner.

Using the slab technique in sculpture class, Erika Dotson molds a creative structure.

As she scrutinizes her painting, Senior Tammy Hershey expertly adds the finishing touches to her still life.

Painting with glue, not with acrylics, Alfred Austin assiduously works on his assignment. His technique contributes to a successful project.

These art students are a fine example of the cooperative Blazer spirit; Tung Nguyen and Elva Lamas work together on the potter's wheel.

The hardest part is finished, in Mr. Kloppe's class, on Somkait Vongvisai's charcoal portrait.

Melodrama is not limited to the stage, as seen in Mr. Allen's photography class. Here Senior Ursula Marcum learns about lighting techniques while still having fun.

The Right Stuff

Blair's music department this year had two dynamic leaders - one offering his experience, the other offering her inspiration.

Mr. Ray Harry, the band leader here at Blair, has been teaching for seventeen years. Since his arrival at Blair four years ago he has improved the talent, enthusiasm, and size of the band. His students express both respect and admiration for his leadership.

"Mr. Harry has developed a great program," said Senior Eric Hobbs, who played in the band for three years.

"He's a great leader," added trumpet player Dan Namovich, also a senior.

Mr. Harry, who is an accomplished trumpet player himself, taught beginning band, symphonic band, and marching band this year.

Blair's choral department had a new teacher this year - the talented Mrs. Chris Mitchell. Mrs. Mitchell had high hopes for her chorus this year. She felt that Blair had "one of the finest choral groups in the county." She hopes in future years to get more people involved in singing and to give Blair more exposure in the community.

What did Mrs. Mitchell think of her first year teaching at Blair?

"It's fun . . . I don't think of it as a job," she told us. "I can't think of anything I'd rather do."

The music department has traveled far this year and will continue to make its journey in the right direction.

Looking Ahead

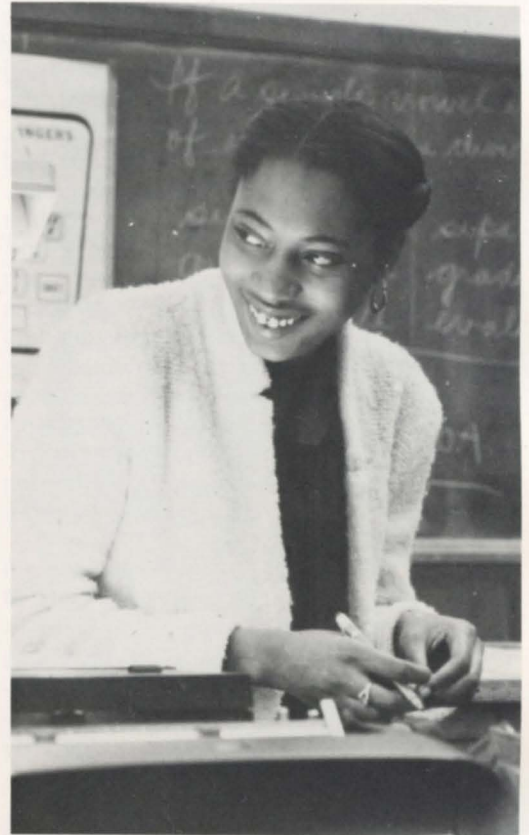

Getting a job sounded ominous, didn't it? J-O-B. That meant W-O-R-K. Oh no, not that four letter word! Working did not have to be a hair-raising idea because right here at Blair students had the chance to acquire the skills for all sorts of jobs. Whether it was fixing cars, cutting hair, fiddling with a radio, memorizing the typewriter keyboard, or applying the finish to a wood table, students did jobs they enjoyed. They knew that the experience they gained from their projects at school would help them develop the skills needed for paying jobs. Looking ahead did not have to be terrifying when an interesting J-O-B equaled M-O-N-E-Y.

"Did I do that?" Looking at his paper, Andrew Lapp and Ms. Picuta discuss the typing errors he accidentally made.

Relaxing for a minute, Doris Coleman decides to take a break from shorthand.

"Don't look at your hands!" Typing takes a lot of concentration, as shown by Phuc Ly.

"What is the answer?" Accounting is a lot of work, but Horalia Vanegas can tackle the problem when she puts her mind to it.

Looking Ahead

An Industrial Revolution

The final moment had arrived, and the massive weather-beaten metal doors slowly rolled up, revealing a tamed Chevy purring like a cat. Rolling out into the daylight, the newly revived car seemed in perfect health. Only the day before, the same car had limped in suffering from carburetor troubles. This accomplishment chalked up another success for the Blair auto-mechanic shop.

Blair's vocational program included much more than working with cars. Experiences ranged from working on wooden cabinets or fixing damaged hair to meticulously designing a house. Not only were these classes interesting, they also helped young career-oriented students get a head start. The vocational program gave a firm foundation on which students could fully develop a potential career.

A new facet of our vocational program was "VICA", Vocational Industrial Club of America. This recently acquired program involved the auto-mechanics class. Blair was the only Montgomery County school involved in VICA, which institutes a job performance test. These tests were judged by people from the automotive industry, for example: garage owners and mechanics.

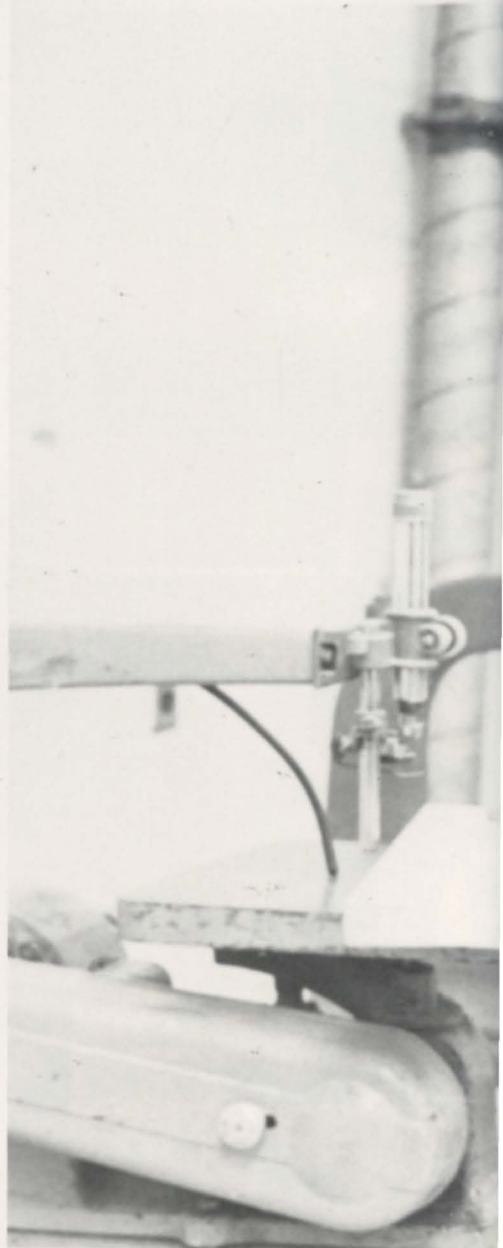

Behind all these new vocational programs were people working together to make Blair better.

Even though it looks simple, giving a perm takes practice, as demonstrated by Silvia Rivas.

As Gary Jasper checks his meter reading, Roberto Figueroa watches the results on the oscilloscope.

Discussing VICA, these two members, Aung Gye and William Porter make plans for the new organization.

In woodworking class, Wareshe Jung assists Mike Thompson.

Concentrating on a drawing, Jamal Dajani carefully designs his next project.

Looking Ahead A Competitive Edge

Many high school students, who were interested in careers in saving lives, joined the National Health Occupations Students of America (H.O.S.A.). They joined the organization to gain service leadership and to work with others who shared similar interests. More importantly, through their participation in H.O.S.A., the students found themselves one step ahead in medical fields.

Three other opportunities to ensure student's chances for a good career were the Cooperative Work Experience, the Work on Credit program, and the Vocational Support Team. The C.W.E. course helped students to prepare for a career by teaching them how to look for a job suitable to their individual needs. The course instructed students in filling out the paper work for income taxes, applications, and resumé's, and provided guidelines for handling the complications of having a job. The W.O.C. program allowed students who had jobs to take off the last half of each school day to go to work. This program had a special bonus for students who participated - they received credits equal to those they would have gotten had they taken elective courses. The Vocational Support Team provided one-to-one instructional aid for Hispanic and Vietnamese students who had trouble translating their native language into English in vocational subjects such as H.O.S.A., Cosmetology and Auto Mechanics. Through Blair's Vocational Department, students found a direct route into the business world.

Looking Ahead Shaping Up

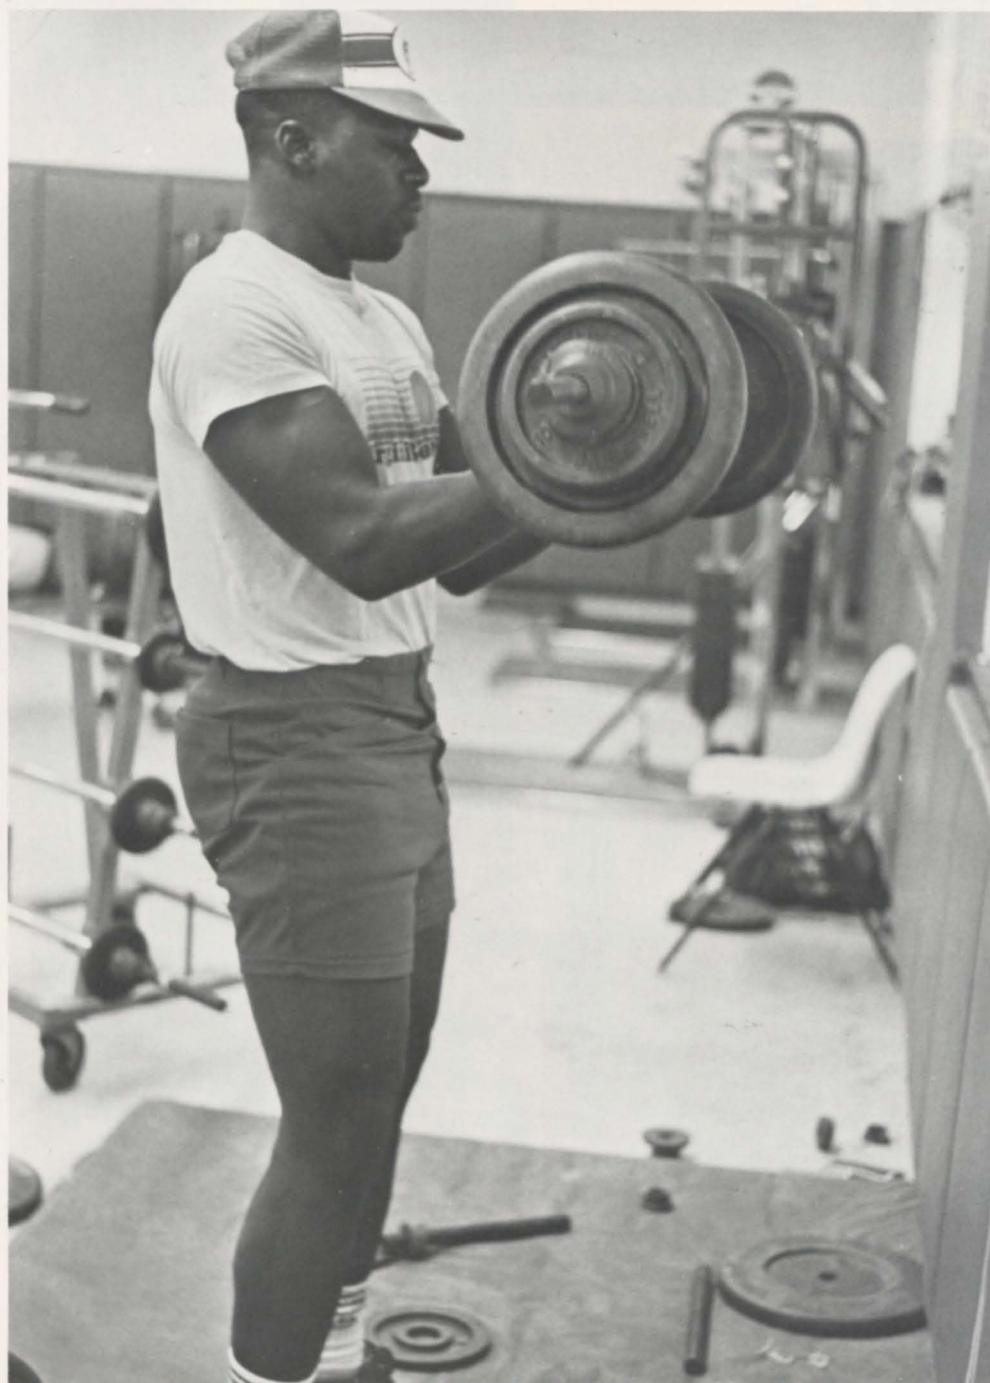

So, you made it to the end of another year. But how? Arriving at school on time each morning was the first essential step. You either walked, rode a bike, caught a bus, or if you were one of the lucky few, you drove a real car. But how did you learn to drive? If you were like most students who drove, you probably learned in Blair's very own Driver's Education department, headed by Mr. Deffinbaugh.

Another step in completing the past year was keeping up self-discipline and physical health. Both of these were easily acquired by students through enrollment in Blair's Physical Education classes. Students were carefully coached by gym teachers Mr. Kobren, Mr. Marosy, Mr. Miller, Mis. Holzberg, Ms. Prophet, and Ms. Changuris.

P.E. students learned discipline through workouts and various athletic games. Driver's Ed. students learned the "rules of the road", through intense in-class study, basic training on the driving simulators, and after school driving with the Easy Method Instructors. Each of these classes provided students with skills that would soon steer them to a winning finish.

No strain, no gain, as demonstrated by senior Kevin McFadden.

Looking Ahead

Input Yields Output

The camera moved in, focusing in on three Blair contenders. These students warmed-up with numbers, words, and logic instead of strengthening muscles and practicing lay-ups. Let us meet Joe, Sue and John as each of them prepared for their competitions.

Joe was really intrigued by his new debate team project. He could not wait until next month when he could debate his topic. Before the meet, he practiced speaking in front of the other debate team members so he could get a few pointers. Until that time came, he spent his afternoons in the library doing research.

While Joe was researching his latest topic, his friend Sue was working on the computers over in D-100. She had joined the club not knowing much about computers, but by the end of the year she had learned graphics and even programmed a game.

John had a meet with the math team earlier today. Yesterday, he looked over his practice dittos and reviewed in his math book to find the answers to problems he did not know how to do. Finally, he felt confident that he could do all his math problems in the amount of time allotted.

These students competed for their school, just as football players or members of the track team had. At the same time they were preparing themselves for their own futures.

Around The World

Around the world . . . in 80 days? That's nothing. Here at Blair you could have gone around the world in one day, without even leaving the school! Walking into the halls of Blair gave students a glimpse of the world beyond their own backyards. Saint-Exupery's Petit Prince told with French words the universally understood ideas of friendship: "On ne voit bien qu'avec le cour. L'essentiel est invisible pour les yeux . . . creer des liens (d'amitie)." These lines communicated that the source of true happiness was to observe with the heart; the essentials of the soul were invisible to the eye. Within Blair's walls many close friendships came from the heart, breaking down international barriers.

German can be more interesting when studying together, as Kiki Faour and MaryAnne Darling learn from Sandy Joyce. Karen Georgiev reflects on her studies.

Around The World United Nations

Blair's student body was enriched with a large population of international students. This enabled Blair to have a variety of clubs where students could appreciate their culture and the cultures of others. The international club was such a club, with eight different nations represented from all corners of the earth. Among some of their exciting activities was a New Year's dance with music and refreshments that originated from the students' native lands.

Blair also sponsored French, German, and Spanish clubs for students who were interested in expanding their horizons internationally. For students who excelled academically in the languages there were the French and German Honor Societies.

Through these clubs and societies Blair students gained a new awareness of the world around them.

Have You Heard The Voices?

Shh, stop. Have you heard the voices in E-building? Now the real question is, can you decipher what the sounds mean? Many of us discovered voices in the halls that we couldn't understand. However, where these voices went during classtime was a mystery, because very few of them ever showed up in our regular classes.

We soon found out they disappeared into classes labeled English for Speakers of Other Languages. Not surprisingly, Blair was the first high school in Montgomery County to provide E.S.O.L. because several years ago Blair received a large influx of foreign students. In addition to the English classes, E.S.O.L. provided instruction in math, social studies, U.S. history, contemporary issues, and science. This year a speech class was added to the E.S.O.L. program and a counselor was assigned last year specifically for working with E.S.O.L. students.

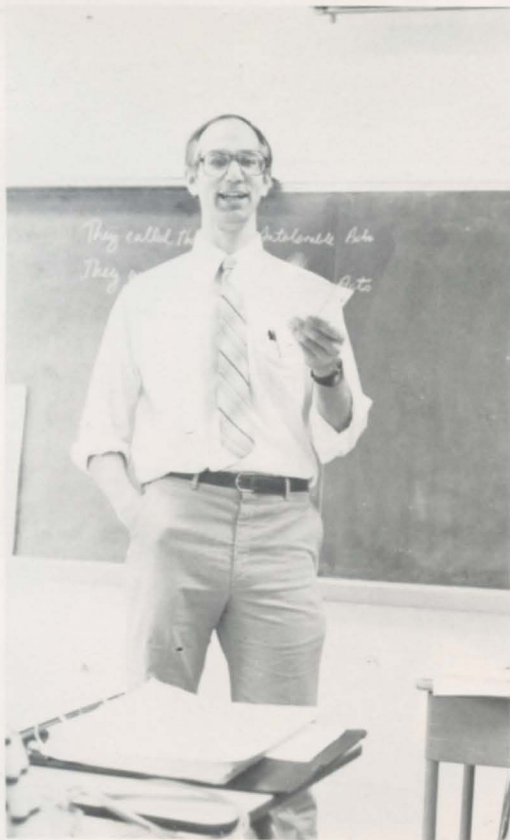

E.S.O.L. had five class levels, since there were a variety of students in the program. Some had never attended school before and others had been honored scholastically in their own countries. The fifteen languages represented within the program were Spanish, Vietnamese, Khmer, Chinese, French, Lao, Hindi, Thai, Korean, Italian, Tamil, Ilo-kano, Kono, Somali, and Vai. The students came from countries all over Latin America, Africa, and Asia, as well as Europe and the Caribbean.

Even though our inflow of E.S.O.L. students fluctuated, we were always ready for them and were glad to gain from their diversity.

So listen again, but this time appreciate the variety of languages, and realize while English is presently a universal language, it is not the only one!

To be a teacher, one should enjoy working with students. Obviously, Mr. Bellino does.

With the help of E.S.O.L. teaching aids, Chhin Sokphy is on her way to improving her English.

Individual work demonstrates each student's ability in the E.S.O.L. classrooms.

Blazers Burn Brighter

If we believed everything we read in the papers, we might think that the brightest people in Montgomery County could only be found at either Springbrook, B-CC, or Whitman high schools. We knew better. Bright, talented, and academically inclined scholars were to be found right here at Blair.

The Montgomery Blair chapter of the National Honor Society recognized these students and their accomplishments by holding a ceremony three times a year, each time inducting new members. The policy for entrance into the NHS was based on grade point average and teacher recommendation, as well as on personal qualities such as service, character, leadership, and scholarship.

The "It's Academic" Club was also geared towards precocious students. It provided an opportunity for intelligent and clever Blazers to test their knowledge. Practice twice a week and frequent scrimmages with teams from other schools prepared the team for the big day, when three members were to compete on television. "It's Academic," like any other quiz show, took more than just brains to win. It also took a lot of guts for the team to appear on television with the risk of losing and perhaps embarrassing their school. But the team was ready to face the challenge; to prove to the public that Blazers do indeed have brains.

SPORTS

Breathless

As the graceful legs flew across the finish line in a final attempt at victory, as a powerful arm dunked the ball for those two extra points, as the foot skillfully tapped the ball into the goal to win the game, we were breathless.

It was the moment even hours of preparation could not plan for. The players called it skill and timing, but we knew it was magic.

Weeks of hard work and practice helped bring about this magic. Each person struggled to find their limits and surpassed them. All enjoyed the companionship of the other players as well as their support and encouragement.

In every sport this year, the players put on a spectacular show that left all of the spectators breathless.

Helping Hands

It was another typical Saturday afternoon game. The arrival of the football team, the cheerleaders, the marching band, and the pom squad composed the familiar scene on the crisp fall day. First, the managers prepared the field for the confrontation to come. This element of preparation was often overlooked, because the manager's main purposes were to organize scores and support the team.

With the field ready to go, the team warmed up, and the game began with the arrival of the Blazer fans.

Instruments tuned, and the sensational marching band played the "Star Spangled Banner." As the anthem concluded, the team began another week's battle to the roar of the crowd. The game raged on, and Blair cheerleaders were right behind every successful play with loud cheers of approval.

At the end of the first half, the marching band flooded the field and brought with them wild cries of enthusiasm from the crowd. To top off the excitement, the pom squad dazzled the spectators with their fancy footwork.

The excitement never abated. It lasted until the following week and then throughout the season. Without the support of so many groups and individuals, the sports activities would fall flat. So, three cheers for spirit at Blair!

Getting ready for the last performance of football season, the Montgomery Blair pom squad does a quick ripple for the crowd before starting their routine.

In Pursuit Of Victory

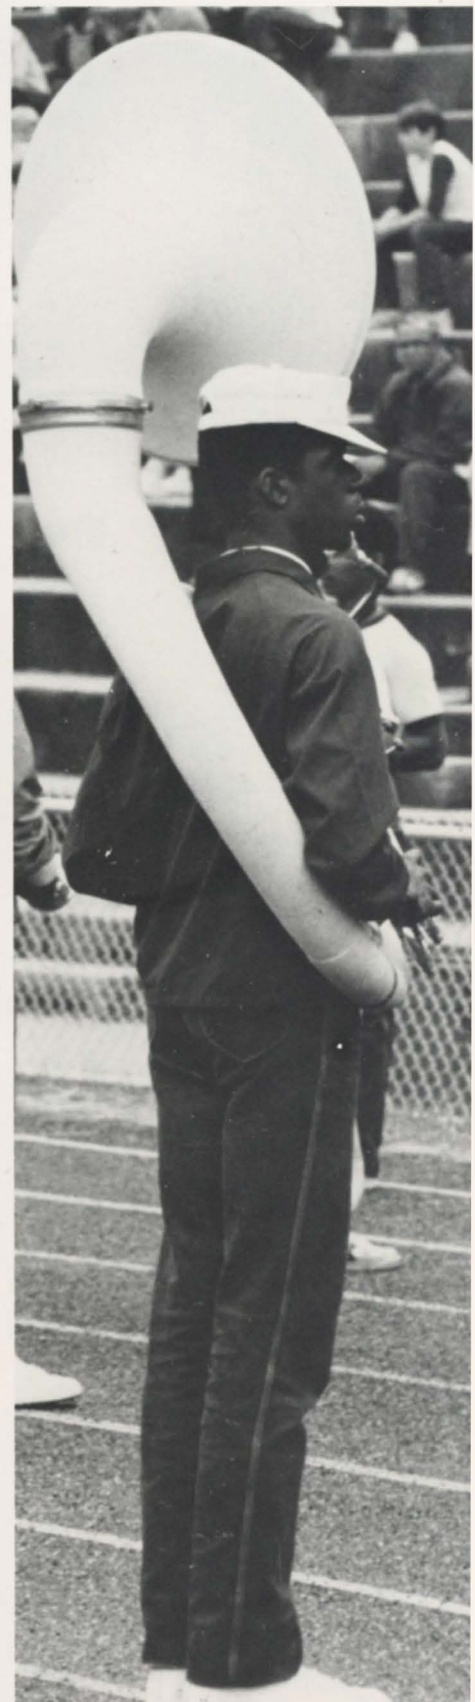

Whistle - two - three - four; click, click, click, click. Advancing across the field in vertical columns, their feet in perfect time with the beat of the drums, the Silver One Hundred Marching Band positioned itself for the half-time routine. The audience in the bleachers paid close attention for many had heard of the Band's reputation and many others had been witness to their spectacular performances. Because the Band worked together with such ease, some observers may not have realized all the hard work put in beforehand. Practicing each day during class and after school was what allowed them to become a top quality act.

While most of us were conscious of the Band's participation, we may not have been as aware of all the time and effort donated to the teams by their managers. The managers also gave up hours after school devoting their time to the team's paperwork, keeping its statistics in order, and taking care of minor details to help things run smoothly. During games, matches, and meets, managers could be seen close at hand cheering on their teams in pursuit of victory.

Whatever the weather, the Marching Band and the Managers were there, ready and waiting, to add their contribution to the Blazer sports events.

Cheerleaders Do It In The "Rah"

Talking with hoarse voices, walking with a limp, and almost falling asleep in class were a few of the characteristics found amongst the cheerleaders this year. Everywhere you'd turn you could see the girls in red and white striving for a perfect "Russian" or persuading their friends to show their school spirit by going to the games. But the most important characteristic of all was the undying dedication of these girls. Come rain, cold, or extreme heat, they cheered the Blazers on and tried desperately to arouse the spark of spirit which lingered in the cobwebs of our hearts. It wasn't long before we found that they had turned the spark into a flame of "Hot Fire."

Fancy Footwork

As another year comes to a close, how can one help but remember the football team's win at Einstein, when Blair fans swarmed the field to celebrate their first victory in two years? And who can forget watching the agility of Kaituta Sikyala as he scored the winning goal amidst the wind and rain to make the soccer team this year's Regional Champions.

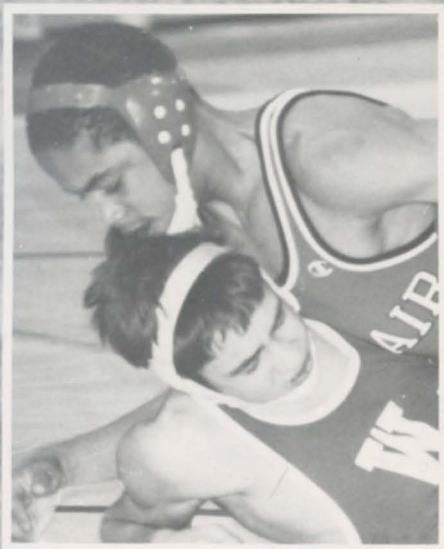

Undoubtedly, it takes skill, coordination, and quick thinking to be an exceptional athlete. This year, Blair had quite a few whose quick, impressive moves dazzled their opponents.

Although the football team finished their season with a 1-9 record, any Blazer fan would admit that they gave their opponents a run for their money.

A number of problems plagued the wrestling team, as a lack of participants forced varsity wrestling to be cancelled. But victory was not foreign to the Blair wrestlers, and in spite of the many obstacles they faced, the team pulled together to give their competition a fight to remember.

The awesome, amazingly skillful soccer team was the pride and joy of Blair's heart. Under the leadership of coach Bill Birmingham, the underrated team took their rivals by surprise, and won both the Division and Regional Championships.

It was a year to remember, full of winners and of memorable performances by both the athletes and their coaches.

After being temporarily thrown out, Coach Seidman continues to argue his case, eventually convincing the referee that he is right.

Fancy Footwork On Their Way

Pain, sweat, and exhaustion, these words best described the Blazer football players after practice. Practice usually lasted about three hours or more, long after everybody else had gone home from school. They worked hard all season, even during the summer before school began.

The highlight of the season was the Blazer's victory over Einstein. Teamwork and determination were the greatest contributing factors, each player gave it their all. "We had a lot of support from the fans," stated one of the Blazers. This statement turned out to be the overwhelming feeling of the players. The energetic fans had supported the team all the way, crowding the stands with their optimistic spirit.

Working with the same intensity as the Varsity, the J.V. team started their season with a fantastic victory over Walter Johnson. Their abundant enthusiasm as a team was what kept them going. Although later on in the season they were not as successful, they made a valiant attempt to maintain their victorious start.

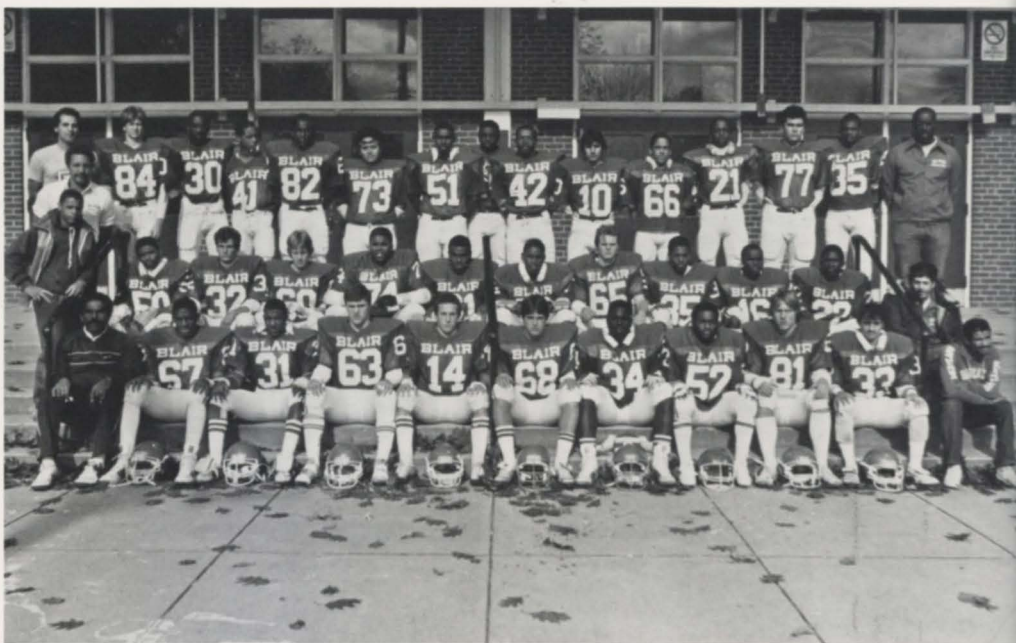

It was a well rounded season. We saw our football teams pull themselves up by their boot straps and improve their performances over the ones of previous years. They had what it takes and were well on their way to becoming a winning team.

Awesome. That was the one word to describe Blair's 1983 Varsity Soccer team. The combination of an unbeatable defense and an unrelenting offense, created by coach Bill Birmingham, made the Blazers what they were. The offense, led by Kaitula Sikyala and Terence McKenzie, would leave any opposing team stunned. The defense led by captain Robert Lill and goalkeeper Ricardo Magloire stopped all who dared venture onto Blazer turf.

But the Blazers didn't stop there. The Serrano brothers, Jose and Ricardo, helped engineer the offensive attack. When the Blazers were close enough they had a secret weapon, the flip-throw. The master of this technique was Baede Minnasse who by using his skill, gave Blair some incredible throws of up to forty yards.

During a hard practice, JV goalkeeper Rob Byers makes yet another diving save.

The 1983 Blazers were characterized as a comeback team. Time and time again they overcame the odds to add yet another game to the "win" column. The most impressive example was when they were matched against Springbrook for the second time. The opposition was ahead two to nothing with ten minutes left in the game when the Blazers exploded. Kaitula Sikyala scored twice within one minute and Blair won in overtime.

In contrast to the Varsity team, the Junior Varsity just couldn't get it together. Yet, they never lost their composure or morale. All of the players had the necessary skills, everyone tried their best, including former Blairite and new JV coach Jose Ortega but it just wasn't enough to produce a winning team. However, the Junior Varsity had something that was perhaps better than wins, they had all the right ingredients for Blair success in future years.

Bounce Back

The ball swished through the basket, bouncing onto the waxed gym floor. Another two points for our team!

Blair has always had a rich basketball tradition. This year was the first in which both varsity boys and girls have had the talent to win the state championships.

The fans cheered their hearts out in support of the Blazers. In turn, the basketball teams' talent and enthusiasm seemed to encourage spirit and unity among the whole student body.

Bounce Back To Victory

Everyone wanted to try to beat the Blazer girls," stated Coach Bill Lindsey. How true! If there were ever any questions that Blair had one of the finest teams in the county, this season answered them all!

It seemed that no one could stop this group of determined girls who blazed their path to victory. The girls had no problem crushing such opponents as Kennedy, B-CC, and Northwood, and ended up being ranked as one of the area's top teams.

The team consisted primarily of seniors who had gained a great deal of experience over the past few years. There was also a lot of talent within the group of underclassmen who provided the team with a strong back-up.

A large amount of credit for the girls' success was due to the fine coaching of Mr. Lindsey. As senior Jo Hall said, "He taught us not only to lose with dignity, but to win with it as well."

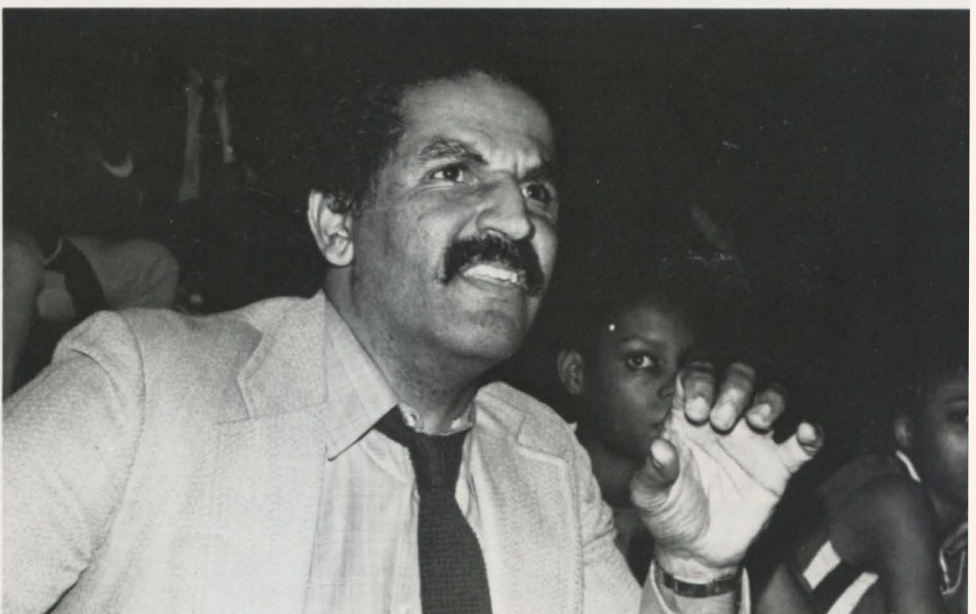

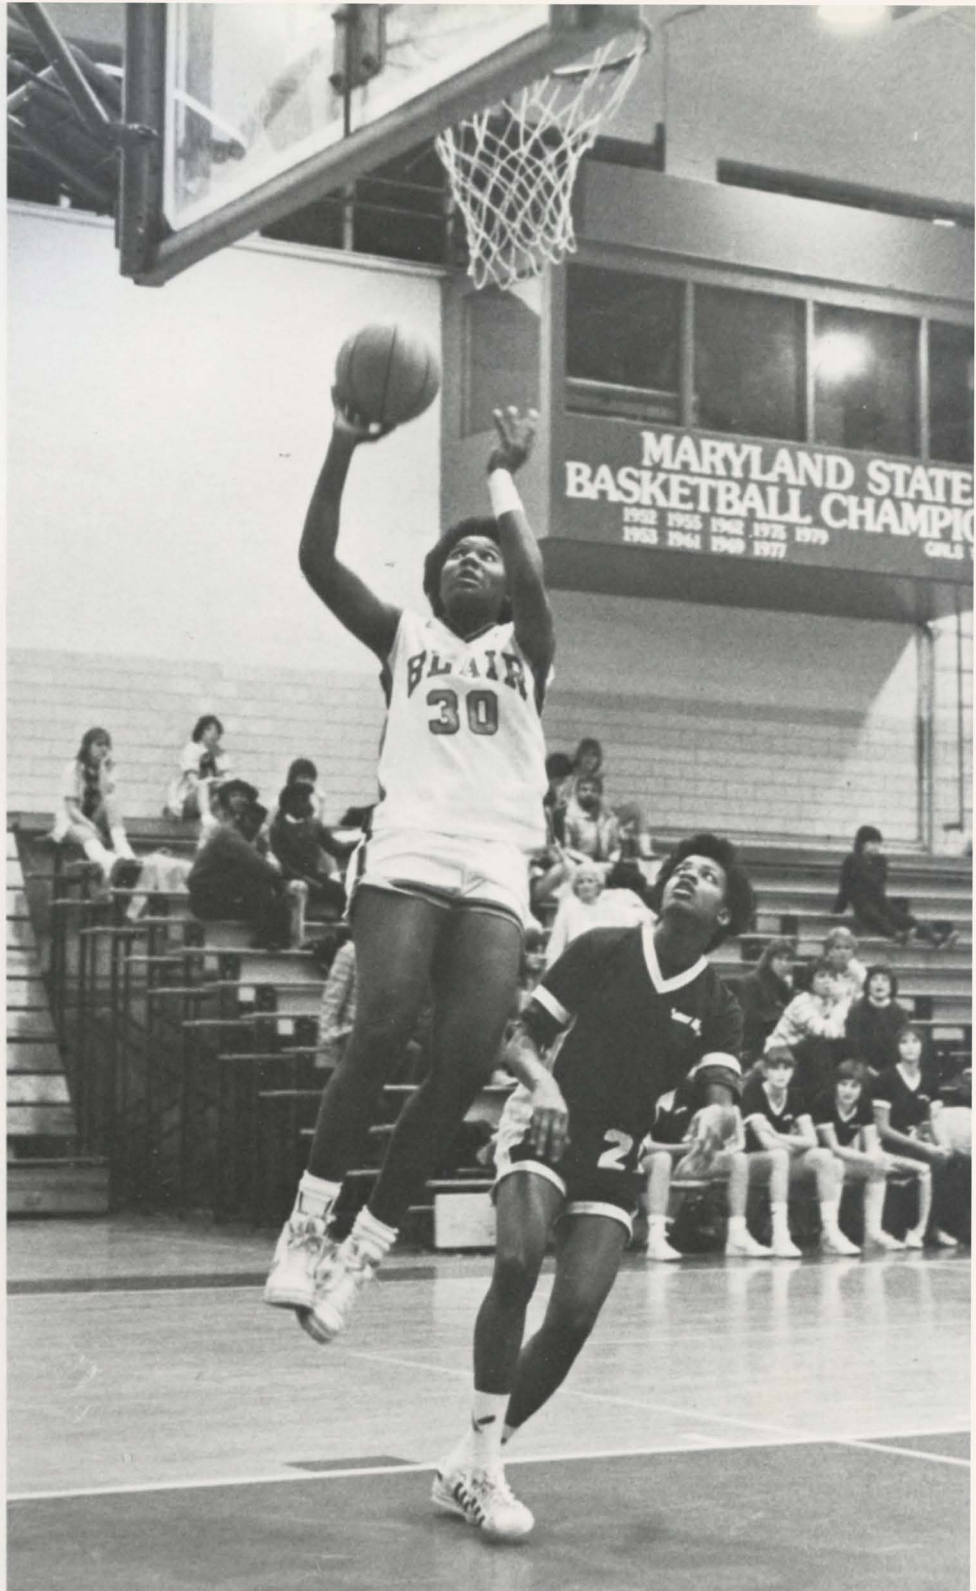

Dignity, respect, and talent. Those are but a few of the characteristics of a winner and that was what the Blazer girls had, both on and off the court!

On one of many fast breaks, Daphne Miles goes up for yet another two points.

In a moment of anxiety, coach Lindsey waits in anticipation of a victory as the last seconds tick off the clock.

All The Right Moves

From the very beginning of their season, the Boys' Varsity Basketball team knew what they wanted - to be winners and to gain some long awaited respect.

And so they did. They were fast, smart, and talented; it seemed as though nothing could stop Blair's eager and experienced team. The Varsity Boys viewed basketball as a job which entailed teamwork, responsibility, and dedication. With the use of impressive moves, fine shooting ability, aggressive offense, and devastating defense the Blazers proved themselves superior by having a victorious season.

Each member of the team played a key role in the many Blazer victories. Slam dunks, outside jumpers, and fastbreaks were what gained the points and allowed the Blazers to dominate the scoreboards.

Another part of the Blazer's success was due to the enthusiastic support of the Blair fans who filled the gymnasium at every home game.

When the season finally came to and end, the players and fans knew they had earned what they had set out to get - a winning season and much deserved respect.

While the Northwood defense watches, Senior Jean Paul Savary goes up for another two points.

Preparing to "psych-out" the defense, Kevin Hutton shows his lightning quick moves.

With speed and determination, Senior Derric Thomas shows who's in control.

Hitting the boards with aggression are Juniors Shaun Lewis and Max Hill.

Bounce Back Bright Futures

Playing basketball requires determination, responsibility, strength, and dedication. This year both Blair's boys' and girls' JV teams had all of these qualities, and therefore had a productive season.

The boys' junior varsity basketball team had a very successful season. Starter Derick Sewer scored 35 points in the second game of the season, while Timmy Haynes' incredible leaping ability helped to control the boards. There were a number of other contributors who helped lead the boys to a winning season.

Unfortunately, Blair's girls' JV basketball team wasn't as victorious as the boys', but they managed to gain much experience for next year. Some key players that Coach Bill Lindsey had his eyes on, were Ginny Assousa and Ginger Frost. Both of these girls were able to get inside and come down with rebounds equally well.

Next year's varsity teams will profit from the talent that existed on both teams.

Out front, Ginny Assousa sets up the offense.

Working hard, playing hard. Those long hours in practice, painful blisters, and pulled muscles were only a few of the agonies athletes had to subject themselves to. But a true Blazer defies the odds and always gives it his all.

As in the past, the rifle team's season was one of pure excellence. Under the direction of second year coach Mr. Reilly, the team seemed to show improvement from one match to the next. This was due to the hard work and long practices which the rifle team members had to endure. Reilly attempted to aid the shooters in improving their skills. This proved to be beneficial for all of the rifle team members. As a result, the rifle team had another exceptional year in competition.

Unfortunately, both the tennis and volleyball teams did not fare as well, as they each ended their seasons without a single win. Yet the Blazers' spirit and pride never diminished.

Without a doubt, the athletes to watch this year were on the golf team. After a disappointing season last year, new coach Ed Smith seemed to bring a fresh style and enthusiasm to his eager team of pros. Senior Jack Benson led the team to a second place finish in their division, with the help of returning seniors Peter D'Orazio and Louis Hoelman. These three experienced golfers could always be counted on to turn in respectable scores in every match, and gained both the team and its players some much deserved recognition.

No matter how many games the Blazers won or lost, the pride and spirit never died. Whatever Blairites attempted, they always gave it their best shot.

The Spike Of Life

After graduating five of their talented starters last June, the varsity volleyball team returned only two of their players. Seniors Lisa Harvey and Joan Stuart. For the young and inexperienced squad it was a long season, full of frustrations and endless disappointments. Winning was a fond memory of the past, as the Blazers fell to a disappointing 0-13 finish. "We simply lacked the experience needed to be a winning team," stated Harvey. "It was definitely a year of rebuilding."

However the Blazers perservered and while they never met with victory, there were those few times when success seemed close by.

The JV team fared no better, as they also finished the season without a single win. The squad was plagued by basically the same problems as the varsity team, but Coach Barbara Aldrich felt "there was great improvement since the season began." Next year when several promising JV players move up to the varsity ranks, they should have plenty of experience for a winning season.

They're On The Ball

Blair really had something to be proud of in its golf team this year. Their performance was really up to "par." But the tennis team shouldn't feel "unloved," they deserve a lot of credit for their hard work and dedication.

Students involved in less publicized sports, such as golf and tennis, often didn't get the recognition that they deserved. The players acquired physical discipline through hard practice and long hours. Dedicated students such as these return year after year, having the satisfaction of taking part and contributing to the over-all Blair Spirit.

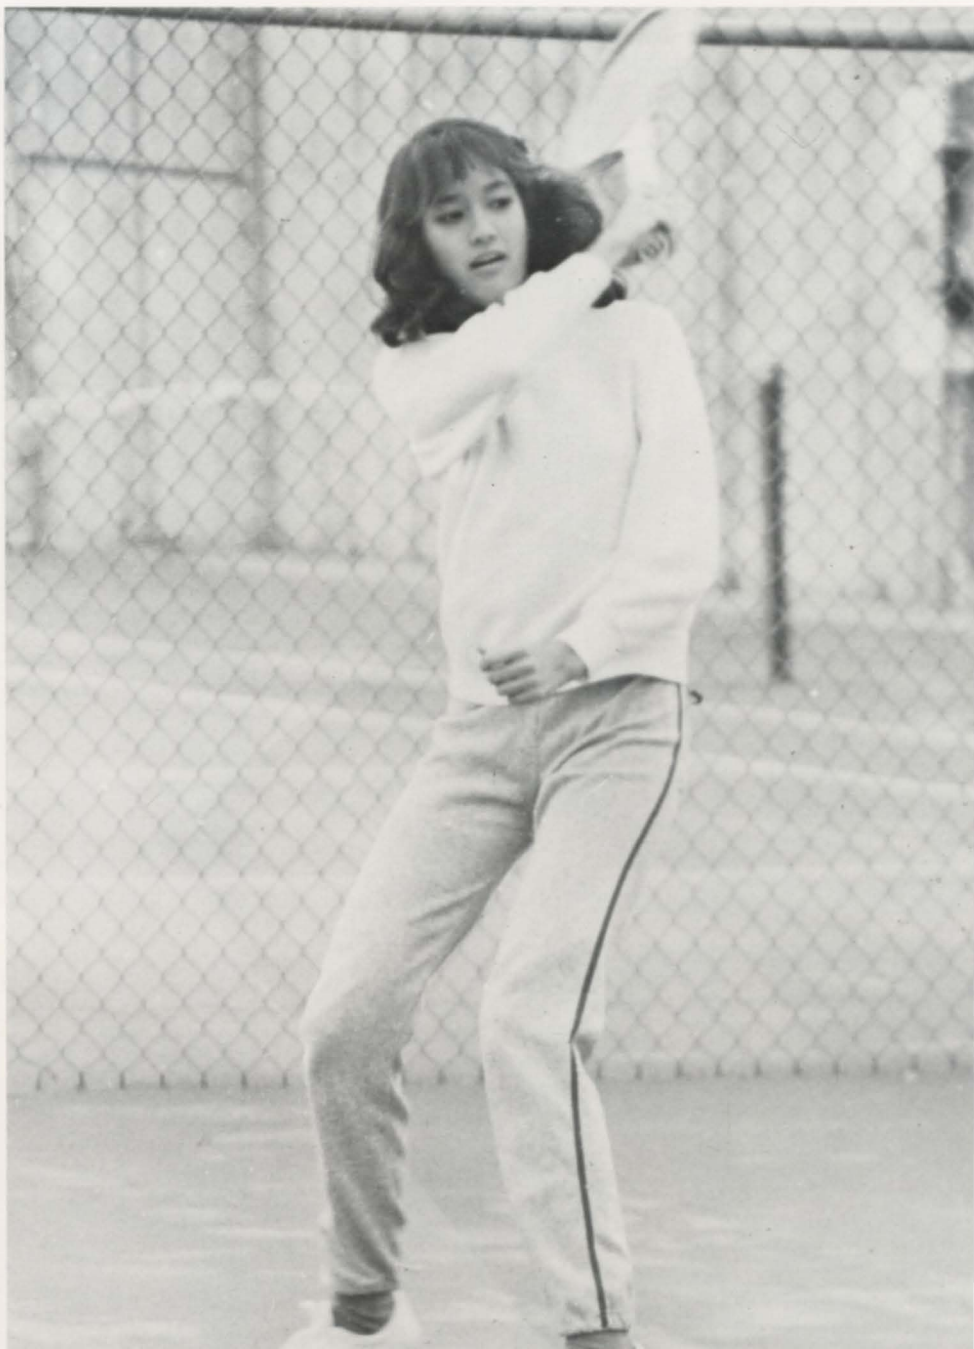

These sports would give a person the comradeship of a team sport and the excitement and challenge of one-on-one competition. The team as a whole might have lost, but an individual could triumph. Each person played a key part in a match; they pooled together their diverse skills to produce a successful team.

Blair had a very energetic and vigorous girls' tennis team this year. Although they were hard hit by the limited number of players, they made great strides in team effort. While not victorious, their bright performance and style could not be dimmed by defeat.

This year's golf team had an excellent season. Under the new leadership of Coach Smith, the Blazers made dramatic improvement this year. From last in the division in 1982, they placed second this year.

Blair has a right to be proud of the tennis and golf teams for being "on the ball."

Getting Into The Swing Of Things

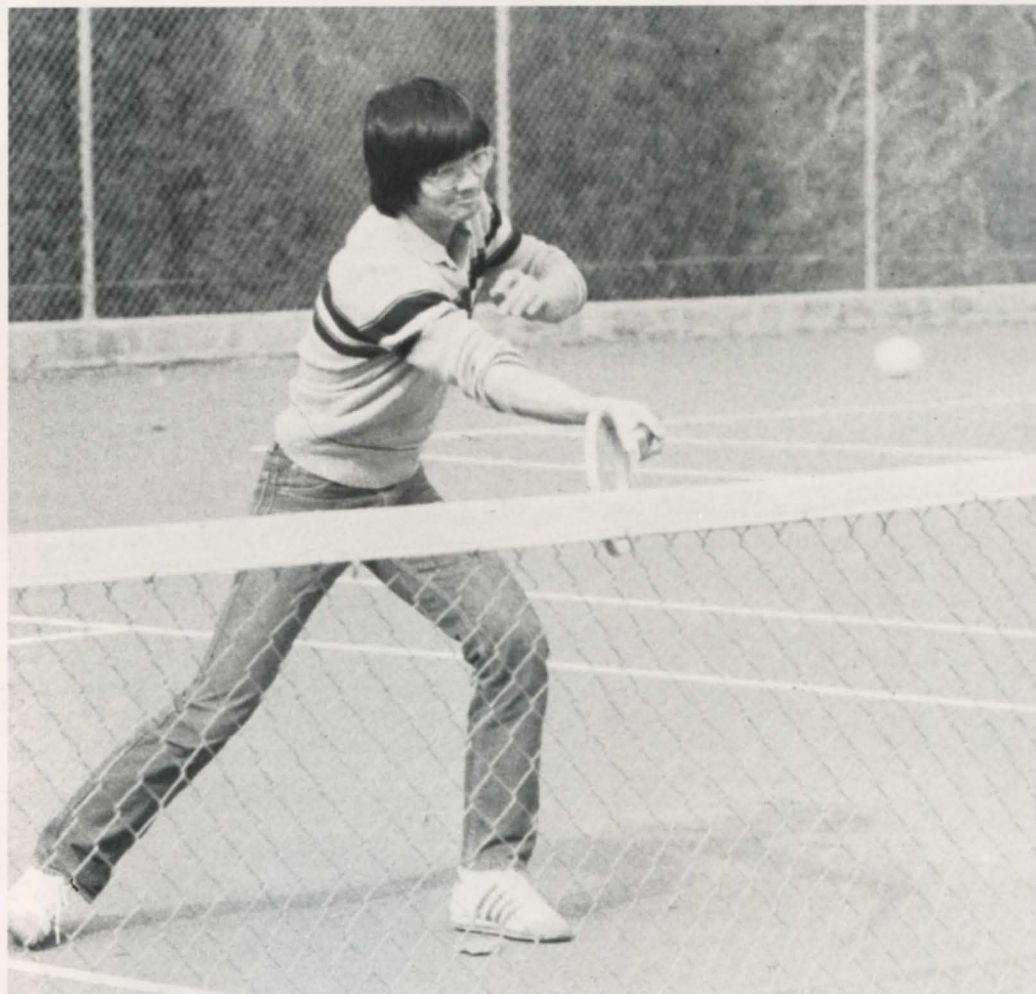

With a hint of spring in the air, students laced up their tennis shoes and hit the courts. Some practiced just for fun, but others were preparing for the boys' tennis team try-outs.

Although many of last year's players graduated, Coach Birmingham approached this year's season with optimism and a winning attitude. With confidence and valiant efforts, the tennis team swung their way into the hearts of all Blairites. Through grueling practices and challenging matches they zealously served, rallied, smashed and lobbed their way to success.

The courts were alive with Blazer magic.

Spring eased its way into Blazer territory slowly but surely, thawing the frost-hardened fields and awakening the growth that the long cold months of winter seemed to have deadened. March 1st marked the beginning of the spring sports season, freeing the spirits of those who longed to frolic in the bright outdoors.

Donning shorts and sneakers, the runners on the outdoor track and field team tackled the asphalt turf, preparing themselves for the challenge of competition. Others practiced on the high jump, long jump, or shot put. Their combined efforts were to produce a fine-tuned team, ready to take on all who opposed them. Sliding in the fresh mud and cracking hits that defied being caught by the outfielders, were the necessary exercises performed by the softball and baseball teams. With experienced members and fresh talent alike, the teams were fated for success. Blair's own ball park, along with the neighboring Nolte field, provided the Blazers with room to build up their potential. Meanwhile, right behind C-building, the girls' soccer team practiced their kicking and swift maneuvers that would be sure to bring them close to their goals. Hard work and clever coaching combined to promise a victorious season. Blair's swim team, who had a very successful winter season, could now plunge into practice at the local outdoor pools, increasing their strength and number.

Although spring marked the last months of school, it was but a beginning for the ambitions of the warm weather athletes.

Batter Up

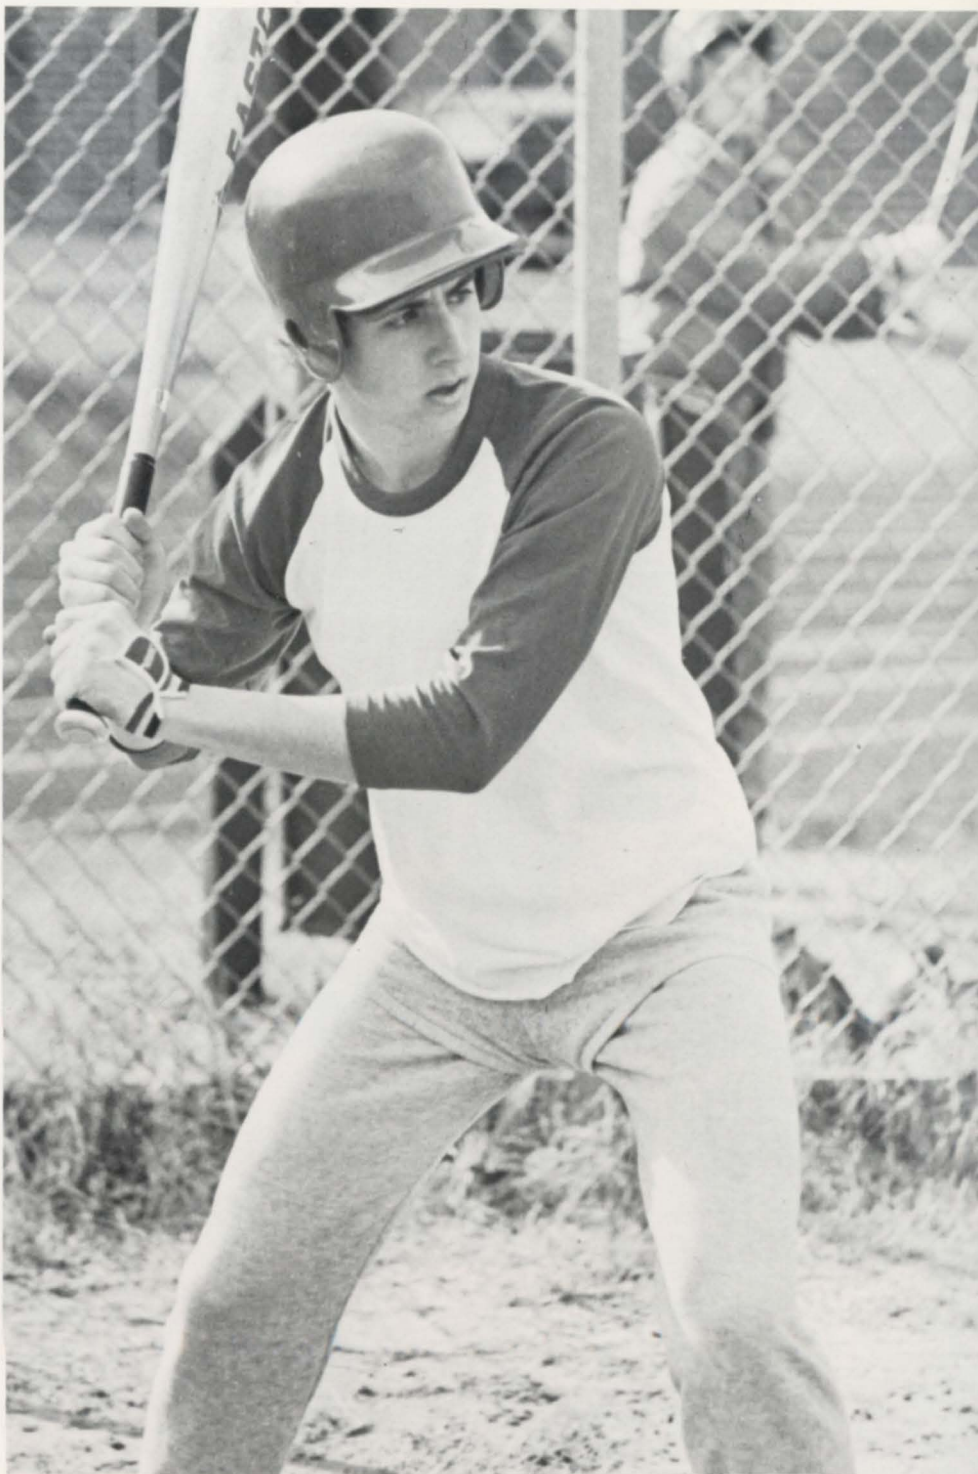

March 1, 1984, may not have meant much to many Blair students, but to an eager group of young men it was a day they had long awaited—the beginning of baseball season.

The team consisted primarily of seniors who returned from last year's squad. Despite the frigid 40° temperature, the returning players, along with a few new hopefuls, prepared for a winning season.

The boys began their training immediately, since the first scrimmage was just a week away. Veteran coach Ed Smith worked diligently with his team, having them go through the drills that would prepare them for their rigorous schedule.

Everyone worked hard, showing skill and enthusiasm throughout the season. The closeness among the team members helped to make the season more enjoyable, and provided the players with a very exciting season. Giving it all they could, the baseball team once again demonstrated their winning Blair spirit.

The girls' soccer team got off to a fresh start this year. Last year they lost quite a few players due to graduation, so this year there was practically a whole new team. The members found motivation in first-year coach, Mr. Stebbins. All in all, the girls really got a kick out of the season!

J.V. baseball was also a part of the spring sports program. This team often didn't receive the recognition it deserved. But the J.V. games were just as much fun to watch and to cheer-on as the varsity games. This year Coach John MacDonald was confident that the J.V. team would shine on it's own.

Both the J.V. baseball team and the girls' soccer team were prime contributors to the success of spring sports.

With their hair dripping wet and their suits cold and uncomfortably damp, they headed out to the locker rooms to change. Behind them, the final whistle that had ended practice still echoed throughout the dark pool room, while above the pool reflecting light patterns danced frantically on the ceiling. The swim team had completed another hard day of practice.

Every Tuesday and Thursday the swimmers and divers gathered in the library and then headed out for Piney Branch Pool. There they trained for the weekly swim meets in short but concentrated practices. The team was captained by Seniors Beth Ragsdale and Tom Spangenberg. The captains worked hard to bring the team together for a successful season. "This year," said Beth, "I wanted everyone to feel like a part of the team." By encouraging one another and dedicating themselves individually to the sport, the members made the swim team live up to the standards that the Blazers had come to expect.

Come rain, snow, sleet, or hail, the Blazer racers practiced and competed for the gold. Either by tracking the familiar dirt path around the school, or by doing laps in the gym, the runners prepared to win for Blair.

"It was a year for building," explained Coach Gouchnour. Both the girls' and boys' cross-country teams were plagued with injuries. Although many individuals showed promising talent, the Blazers achieved limited success.

Indoor track came right around the corner and the Blazer talent began to bloom. The team was "small in number but large in quality," according to Coach Gouchnour. Weight training built their muscles while running for endurance built their speed. The fever spread and soon they got what they wanted: a very successful season.

With skill, talent, and many improvements, the outdoor track team was very strong.

All of the work done during indoor track season gave the Blazers the strength they needed for the outdoor season. Once again Blair runners proved that they lived in the fast lane.

Blair's Best

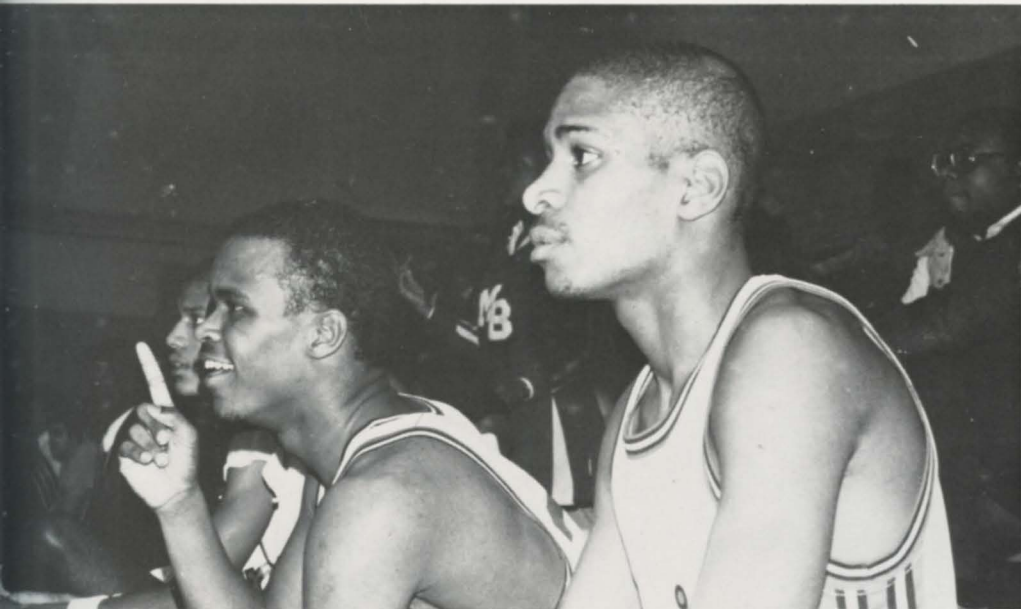

It took more than just talent to have been a great athlete. The dedication, the spirit, and the drive to win were just as important.

This year, the Blair athletic program was fortunate enough to be graced with a few individuals who possessed all of these qualities. They helped to make this year in sports a memorable one.

Who can forget the day the varsity football team defeated Einstein of the thunderous roar of the crowd as the boys and girls basketball teams blazed a path to victory? We remember well that cold evening when we huddled together on the High Point soccer field to cheer on our Regional champs, as well as those warm spring afternoons when we basked in the sun while watching our baseball team in action.

But as we look back, it seems that there were always those people who we remembered a little more than others. They were people who gave a little more to their teams and to the game itself. With their efforts they succeeded in winning the respect of the coaches, their fellow teammates, and the Blazer fans, whether their team suffered from defeat or rejoiced in victory. Montgomery Blair honors those stars who have made their mark in our history books. Congratulations!

This year's varsity basketball team owes a large amount of their success to Seniors Derric Thomas and William Ortiz.

AFTER HOURS

Dedication And Motivation

One would think that six and a half hours of classtime, plus homework every night would be enough for most students. However, there were many die-hards who just couldn't get enough. Thanks to them, the building was open late so we could get the books we forgot that afternoon which were needed for the night's homework. We also had entertainment such as the Blair theater productions and memories year after year recorded by the school's newspaper and yearbook. So here's to all those who spent hours of hard work, motivated by their ever present dedication... after hours.

Ertters, Fairway and McDonald's are not the only places where hungry Blair students can get food. Besides selling folders and notebooks, the school store also sells snacks to munch on.

Two uninvited guests, Jenifer Thiele and Rebecca Trimble, invade Neil Pollner's stage-set bedroom in "Murder In A Nunnery."

Silverchips members, Maureen Cohen, Rosanne Mencher, and Kristen Shenk are preparing the newspaper for the printer.

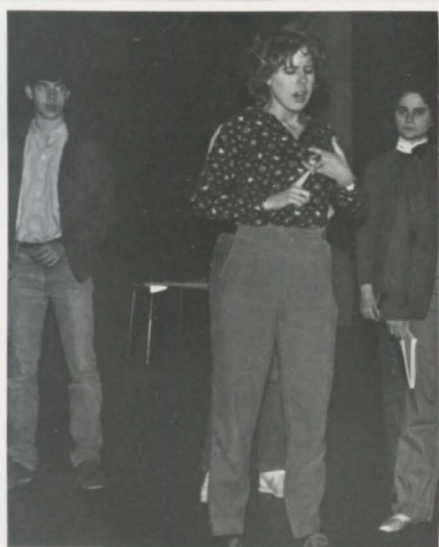

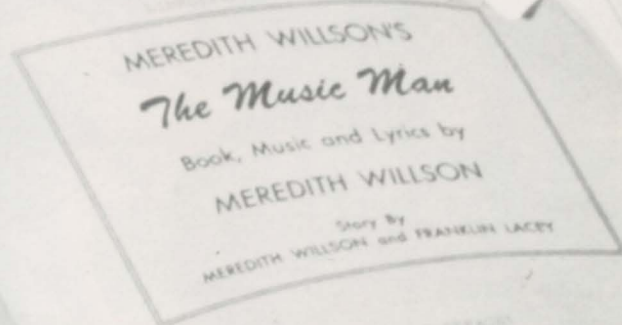

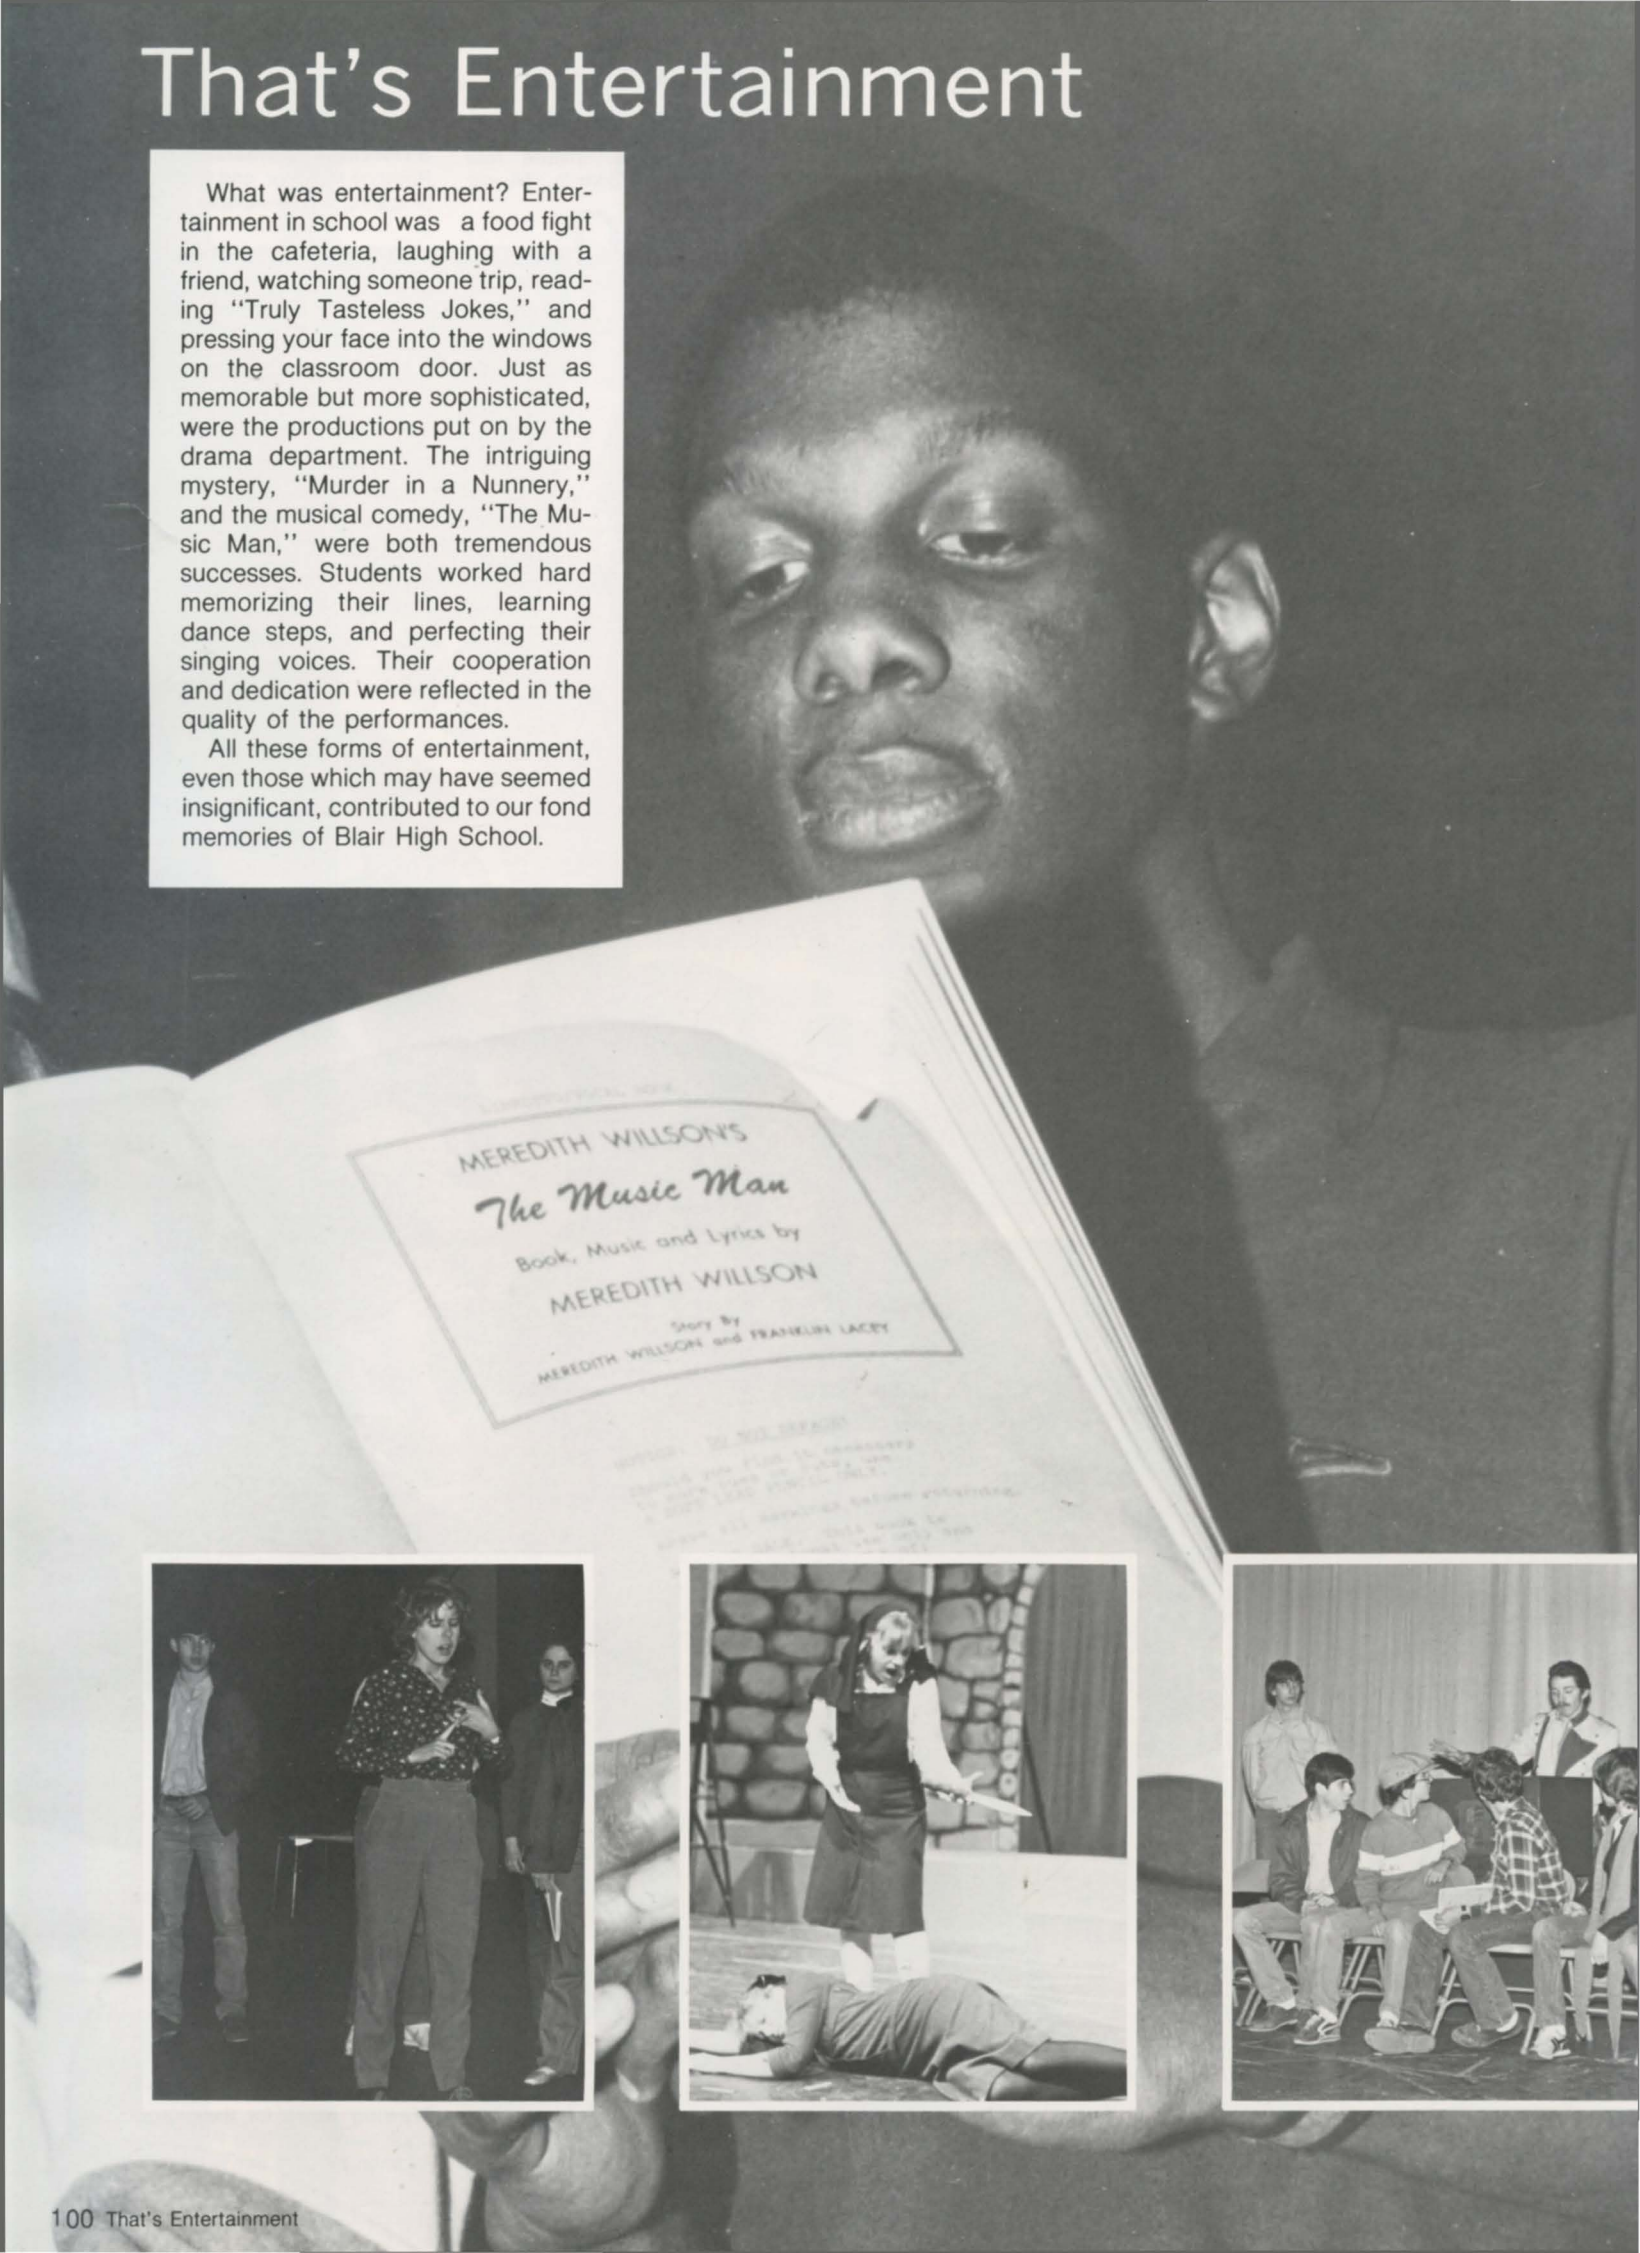

Every Thursday, student government officers meet to discuss options open to the school.

Drawing plans for their pages, Silverlogue members Rose Province and Lisa Feldman prepare the yearbook.

That's Entertainment

What was entertainment? Entertainment in school was a food fight in the cafeteria, laughing with a friend, watching someone trip, reading "Truly Tasteless Jokes," and pressing your face into the windows on the classroom door. Just as memorable but more sophisticated, were the productions put on by the drama department. The intriguing mystery, "Murder in a Nunnery," and the musical comedy, "The Music Man," were both tremendous successes. Students worked hard memorizing their lines, learning dance steps, and perfecting their singing voices. Their cooperation and dedication were reflected in the quality of the performances.

All these forms of entertainment, even those which may have seemed insignificant, contributed to our fond memories of Blair High School.

Clowning around on the set, the inspector (Neil Pollner) threatens Mother Peagle (Leslie Schipani) with a knife, while the Sergeant (Jon Persons) looks on.

Receiving an important phone call, Mother Peck (Julie Johnson) asks advice from Reverend Mother (Kirstin Pauli) on what to say.

After the Baron (Ed Iverson) reveals that he is a spy, Mrs. Moss (Ursula Marcum) collapses in anguish.

While Mother Trevor (Michelle Stewart) reads one of her favorite stories out loud, the students (Carleene Sindelar, Jennifer Thiele, Becky Trimble, and Fran Eskin) react, each in her own way.

That's Entertainment High Stepping

Behind the double doors stood a staircase that led to another world. With each step came the odors of make-up, hairspray, and hot curling irons, mingled with the musty scents of old costumes and the harmonies of a barbershop quartet. By the middle steps a girl in a long dress could be spotted rushing across the hall searching for a lost slipper. "The Music Man" was underway!

How did it all begin? The first steps were the hours of dance, musical, and speech auditions. These were followed by tedious call-backs in the January-cold auditorium. Then came the daily practices, lasting sometimes until six o'clock, which prepared the cast for the upcoming performances. All those long rehearsals finally paid off! The pit band, ATT, and the stage crew, along with various other committess created a spectacular production. Finally, the top step was reached. The curtains opened to reveal an early-1900's set, while the orchestra serenaded the audience. The cast brought energy and excitement to River City, Iowa, where "The Music Man" took place.

From the first step of auditions to the final step of production, the cast and helped each other to reach their goal.

Behind The Scenes

All The World's A Stage

Every now and then, while traveling on the often frustrating road of life, one needs to escape into the realm of acting. In school we had a special club for those people who found it particularly exciting to enter that imaginary world of the theater. These were the Thespians. Since acting was a part of everyone, it was not surprising that the club consisted of such a diversity of students.

The members of the club were people who knew acting well, and loved it. Although meetings were usually all business, the actors' main concern was producing the best show they could. Being a Thespian was not limited to just acting. Costuming, make-up, set building, and stage directing all had to be done. The Thespians were involved in every aspect of preparation as well as acting in the end-product.

This gathering of multi-talented students worked together to produce terrific entertainment for the community. Blair's tradition of putting on two excellent shows was carried through another year.

Setting the scene, Senior Meredith Craig and Sophomore John Lill add finishing touches.

Making herself useful, Julie Johnson aids in Colleen Kaplin's performance preparations.

That's Entertainment Putting It All Together

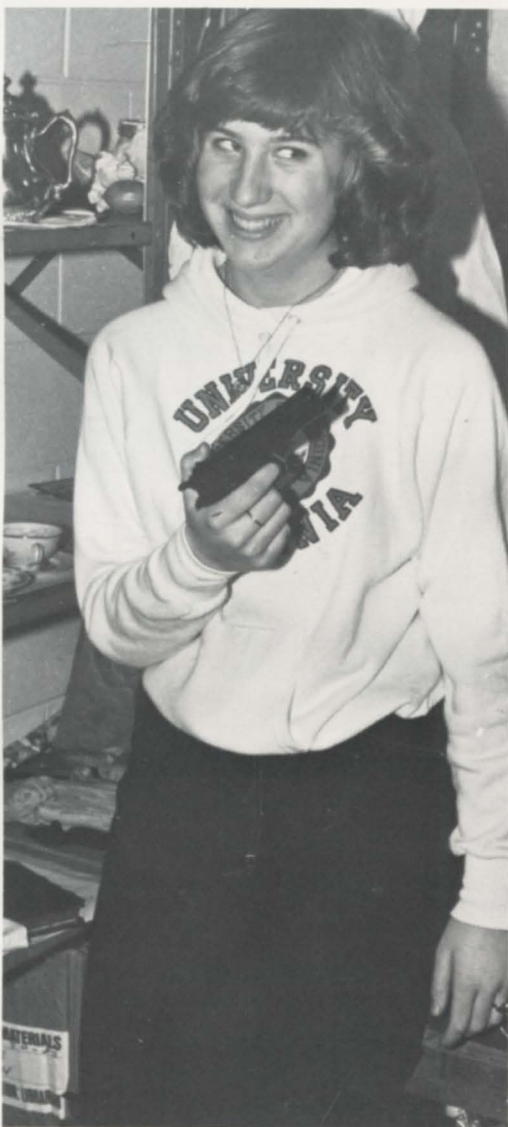

When the audience started filtering into the auditorium to see one of Blair's productions, different committees and cast members were already busy at work backstage.

Costume committee members could be found replacing lost buttons or zipping people into their costumes. Those in charge of make-up were choosing the shades of lipstick and eye shadows or applying wrinkle lines to students portraying older characters. People working with props were frantically searching for such items as rifles, which were often misplaced at the last minute.

Almost miraculously, when the curtain opened and the show began, costumes were sewn up, make-up was on and props were in their correct places.

All this would have been impossible without the many dedicated individuals who worked together for so long. To think there were only three brief nights of glory for each of the two shows!

"Watch out," threatens props chairperson Beth Kimball, "If anyone touches my props they're dead!!"

Together with the sponsors, committee members helped the cast produce great shows. With a six page list of props and sixty-five people to outfit, "The Music Man" was not an easy task. "Murder in a Nunnery" had fewer people, but the nun's costumes and the knife trick posed great problems for the committee members. Whatever the problem, the committee members were willing to tackle it, and it always got done.

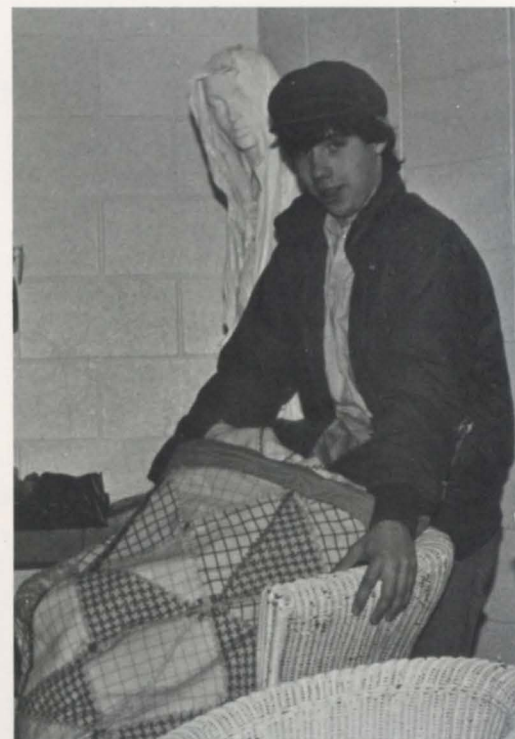

Scrounging through thousands of costumes, Tom Johnson sorts out which outfits would be appropriate for the show.

Stage Directions

The show had to go on ! But to keep it going we needed the stage crew and ATT working behind the scenes. Could you imagine having to watch "The Music Man" on an empty, dark stage? That doesn't sound too exciting!

Blair had a talented, dedicated crew setting the stage for "The Music Man." Mr. Jack Dillinger was the crew sponsor who gave up his time to come to Blair and work with our crew. Mr. Joseph Reilly was the sponsor of the fall show. If you thought stage crew just involved picking up a hammer and pounding a nail, you were wrong. It took a great deal of planning and hard work to produce a quality set. This year the stage crew spent nine weeks on designing, constructing, and painting the "Music Man" set. Their work was made all the more complicated by the 25 scenery changes throughout the play!

Lights! Sound! Action! Without ATT (Auditorium Theatre Technicians), the actors would have been playing hide-and-seek in the dark. Mr. Wilson, the ATT sponsor, helped them organize their work which required detailed design and planning. By working with lights and sound, they were able to create special effects that made the production unforgettable.

You might think that the stage crew and ATT had the bad end of the deal, with all their hard work and little recognition. But there was a lot of self-satisfaction involved in contributing to a big production. There's no business like show business!

With a light touch Alec Isaacson adjusts the equipment to fit the mood of the scene.

The sound equipment looks like a maze of buttons to most people, but David Gibson controls them with ease.

For All Seasons

From the yellow, oranges, and browns of autumn to the sparkling lime greens of spring, the seasons' colors brightened our lives, as did the endless list of activities to do during and after the school day.

Whenever the weather began to change, Blair students found themselves able to adapt their lifestyles to the new season without much hassle. As the cold blasts of wind swirled in from the North, the Ski Club grabbed their boots, waxed their skis, and headed for the slopes. After the snow melted, tender blades of grass began to push through the warm spring soil. Seeing these signs, the Trail Blazers and the Hook, Line, and Sinker Club trekked into the wilderness to discover new paths and fertile fishing holes.

Meanwhile, back within the brick walls of Blair (but by no means confined by them) many other important clubs were functioning all year round. The Ebony Club re-created the events of Black American History while the Fashion Club discovered the dazzling new styles of the eighties. The Safety Committee devoted itself to protecting the students from such dangers as fire and flood, whereas members of the school store were there to serve everyday needs. The Student Government outlined the students' rights and privileges and their opportunities to speak their opinions. Throughout the year, Silver Chips reported the news of the day while Silverlogue recorded the memories for the future. Blair had something for all, Spring, Summer, Winter, and Fall.

For All Seasons More Pride And Spirit

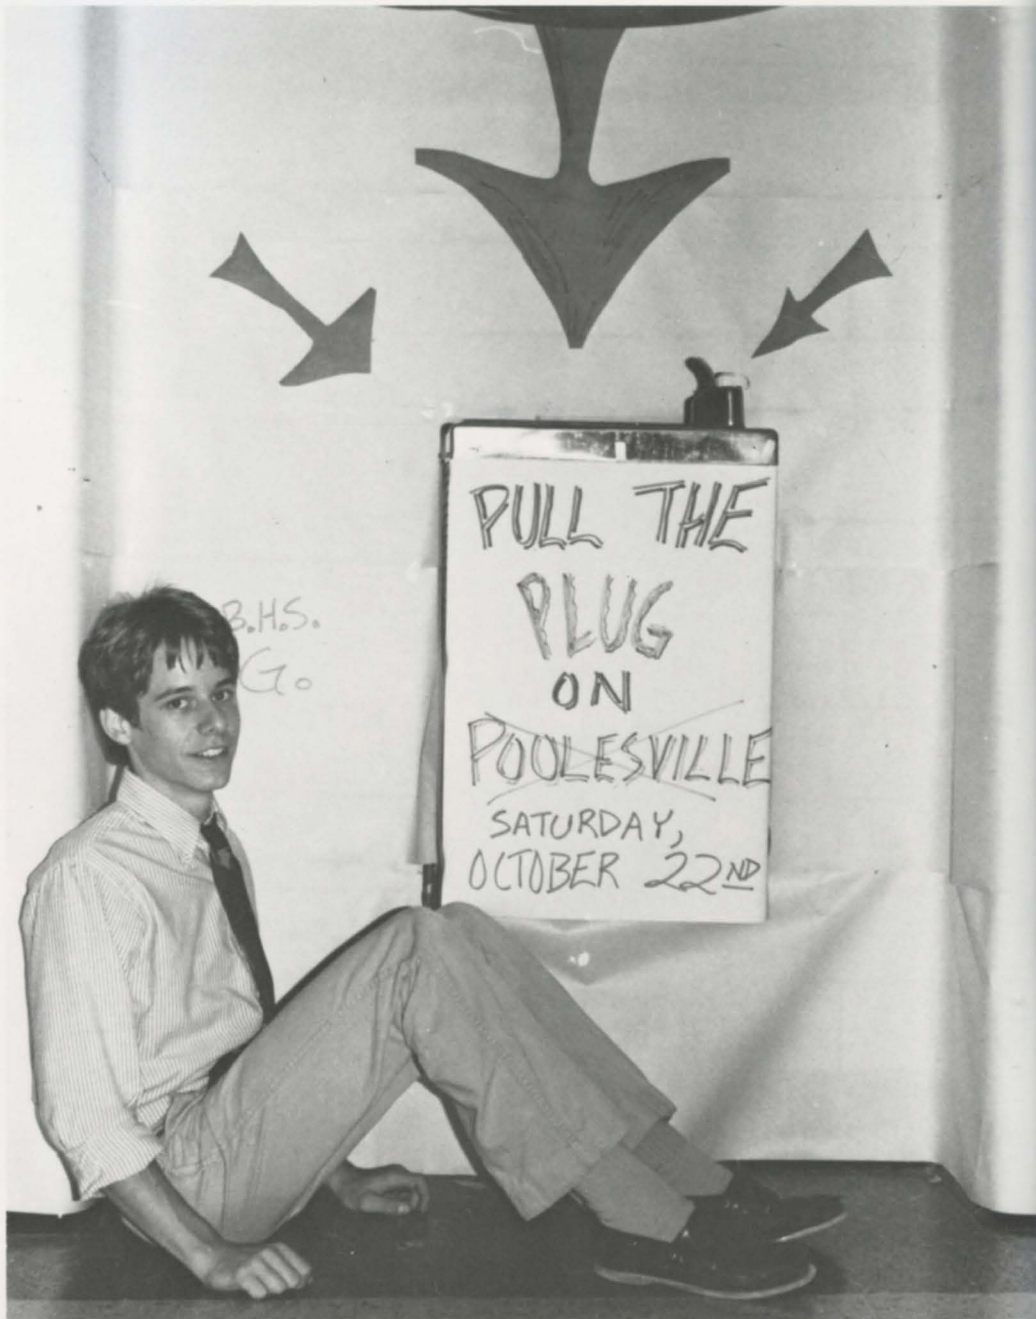

From the time a Blair student first walks through the doors of our school, until the day the graduate walks across the stage at Cole Field House, the Student Government is responsible for coordinating all the events and activities with which the Blairite has been involved.

Led by President Kyle McDowell, the Student Government underwent a complete reformation. McDowell's goal was to obtain "more pride and spirit in Blair, and to give our school a better reputation countywide."

Along with the new administration, came a load of innovative ideas. Some of the projects S.G. undertook were a canned food drive, a student exchange with Springbrook, a night pep rally and dance, and a proposal to modify the hat ban.

Unfortunately, many Blair students failed to realize and appreciate all the work S.G. had to do to meet the students' needs.

Taking a break from his Homecoming activities, president Kyle McDowell finds a moment to relax.

The Great Outdoors

Spring-time garage sales! A chance to get rid of all that old furniture and the bike and fishing rod you never got around to using. But those who took a second look at their bikes or fishing rods, and decided to keep them, were in luck. Mr. Gochnour and Mr. Cornnor each sponsored a club for students who enjoyed the outdoors. The Hook, Line, and Sinker Club, started by Mr. Gochnour, gave students who had fishing licences a chance to try their luck at nearby lakes, rivers, and ponds. The club finished the fun by renting a boat to go fishing in the Chesapeake Bay. The Trail Blazers, led by Mr. Cornnor, went riding on all the local bike paths they could find. Breezy October Saturdays or sweet, sunshine-filled May afternoons were perfect times to explore the surrounding countryside. With clubs such as these, even students with unusual hobbies could enjoy them with their friends at school.

For All Seasons They've Got Style

Fashion shows, plays and field trips; these were a few of the highlights of the Ebony Club this year. The purpose of the Ebony Club was to instruct interested Blairites about the history and culture of Black Americans. The club, sponsored by Mr. Connor, provided its members with an opportunity to demonstrate their various talents and creative ability. In December, the Ebony Club sponsored a fashion show which was colorful as well as profitable. Also, in January they produced a spectacular play dedicated to Dr. Calvin Rubens. The play was written by an Ebony Club alumnus, Urusla Mclymont. The production was a great success. The Ebony Club had another fantastic year, due to the active participation of its devoted members.

Blair had a new club this year, the Fashion Club. Being a new organization, it had to start from the bottom and work its way up. Their sponsor, Mrs. Mitchell, and the members went right to work. They put on a classy fashion show in February. This club will be strutting new styles for years to come.

Posing in the library, Kim Hawkins and Sofia Badillo hope to be models in the future.

Move

Ahhh, the life of a reporter. The glamor, the travel, the exotic countries . . . unless, of course, you happened to be a Silver Chips editor.

Just what was the job of a Silver Chips editor? How does writing two or three stories at a time sound? And what about sending out photo assignments, writing headlines, laying out a page, and of course those infamous deadlines! Many of Blair's students didn't realize the work didn't stop in the classroom. Editors had to grow accustomed to long, tiring hours at the printers where the only sounds were the roll of three presses, the chatter of the students' excitement, and the thunderous growling of one's stomach.

This year, Silver Chips undoubtedly had the most talented and ambitious group of editors ever assembled. Headed by sponsor John Mathwin, and Editor in Chief Jennifer Barrett, the staff managed to put out one of the best papers in the state. There were always thought provoking letters and interesting stories which caught Blair's attention.

At the end of the year, the Silver Chips staff left Blair with many warm memories, knowing they had done their finest work. This year, more than ever, the Silver Chips staff was on the move.

Sharing a laugh after meeting their deadline are fellow sports editors Donna Ramroop and Jack Benson.

In an effort to get more Blairites involved, Jenny Barrett and Kristin Shenk design an interesting new bulletin board.

because if it's not, you've discovered a new breed of mold. After a quick swipe with a rag the identification is made—it's a book, but not any old book. This is your high school yearbook. Sitting down quickly, you start flipping through the pages. As the memories come flooding back a knowing smile spreads across your face. Ah, those were the days. No responsibilities, no children, and no taxes. Oh, there's your good friend and the boy or girl you went out with in 11th grade.

You sit and wonder where they are now. Most likely they're sitting on a dirty floor, next to a pile of worn out 45's, wondering where you are. Finally closing the book you carefully lay it on a clean shelf. Tomorrow will be another busy day, but today you've found a treasure.

Getting advice from Janine McGrath, Leslie Schipani tries to choose a picture from the contact sheet.

SENIORS

A Celebration

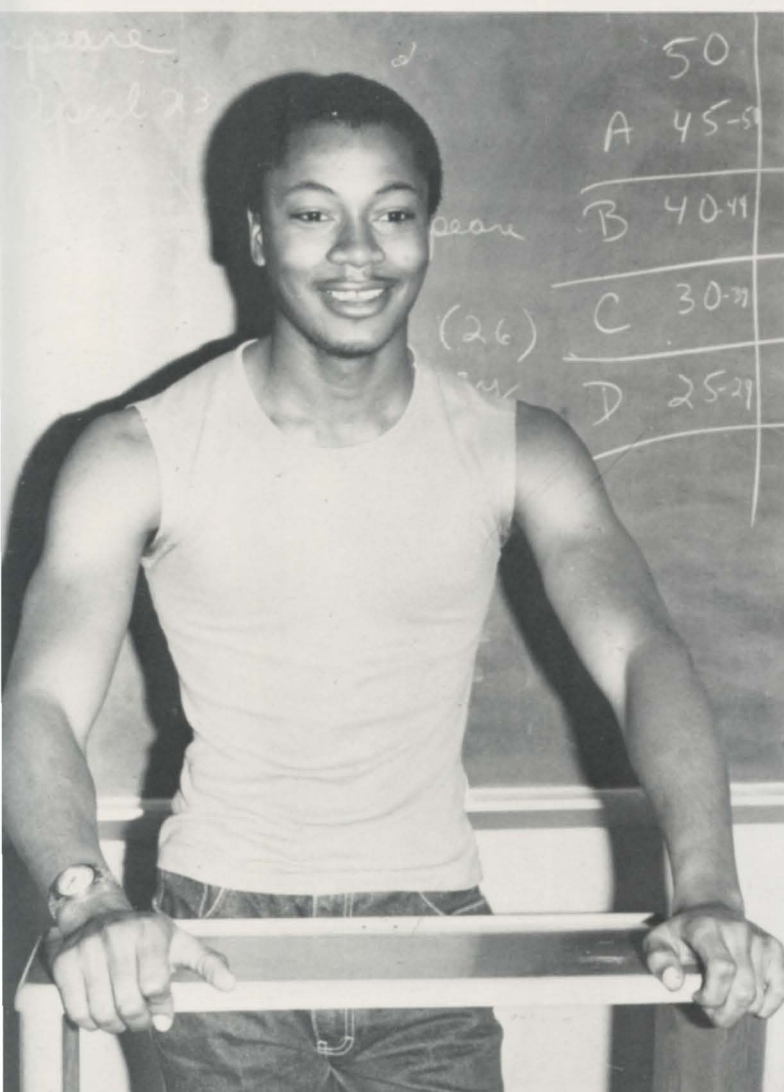

There's a little bit of devil in all Blazers. Exposing his alter ego, Senior Carlos Aguilar watches the fiery action on the field.

It was a year to celebrate. After struggling through two long years of adjusting to new faces, new surroundings, more homework, and harder subjects, we, the class of 1984, had finally mastered the ropes. As seniors we could relax; we could laugh off a problem that two years ago would have seemed like a major crisis. Realizing that high school, for us, was drawing to a close, we turned our final year into a celebration. Sure, there were college applications, SAT's, and exams to worry about, but the future wasn't always on our minds. With graduation day close at hand, we could afford to take advantage of senior privileges. Where we may have slacked off in concentration, we made up for with enthusiasm. We lifted up our cans of Coke and gave a toast to ourselves because our senior year was one to enjoy!

Taking a seat, Senior Carlita Waytes prepares for spirit week.

Three cheers for Blair! Seniors Anna McHugh and Vivian Hsia stand up so not to miss the action.

A sunny smile is Senior Molly Gross' way of saying hello.

Leading Ladies

The best man for the job was a woman in each office of the Senior Class Administration. Returning for their third consecutive year were President Vivian Hsia, Vice-President Kim Talley, and Secretary Jonell Scamahorn. The new addition was Diana Haggerty as Treasurer. These leading ladies combined knowledge and experience to accomplish the work cut out for them. They pooled their resources to discuss problems and plan projects. Never forgetting who they were working for, the officers made an effort to keep the senior class informed and involved. The class of '84 couldn't have asked for more.

Distinguished Seniors

From under the door a thin ray of light glowed long after the midnight hour. Books were piled on the desk, pushed aside as a student wrote the final line to a composition. Is this the image of a Merit Scholar?

Blair had two Senior Scholars this year. Some reasoned these students loved to study, but that was not always the case. Jan Gray enjoyed playing the flute, reading, babysitting and the secretarial job she held after school. She only did her homework as a last resort! Chat Ewing enjoyed reading, and his other interests included motorcycles, swimming and ballet. Jan and Chat did not fit the Merit Scholar stereotype.

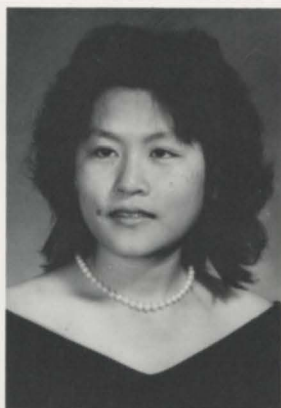

While Jan's and Chat's high test scores brought Blair recognition for academic excellence, so did the high grade point averages of six other students. Our state acknowledged these Blairites as Distinguished Scholars. From the start of each hectic day these students carefully made room for work and study.

When scholars turned off their lights it was the final note to a long day. A day in which they learned a bit more and had a lot of fun.

A Girl And Her Snake

Throughout history, there has been a popular belief that serpents and women don't mix. In many cases this is true. After all, it's a common sight, when happening upon a snake, to see the nearest girl shrink back in terror.

But this was not always the case. In fact, there were many girls who actually enjoyed the company of snakes. One such girl was senior Carol Fotopolous, who owned a seven year old Boa Constrictor named Shoren. The five-foot long Boa was given to Carol last summer by her boyfriend's sister. This carnivorous reptile was fed a cute, little, furry, bright-eyed mouse once a month, a normal diet for such snakes? Occasionally, Shoren was treated to a feast of a rat. Since owning her snake, Carol has overcome the initial queasiness that came with feeding him live animals. Not many of us would trade places with Carol, but we greatly admire the ease with which she befriends the much feared serpents.

Posing provocatively with Shoren, her pet Boa Constrictor, Carol Fotopolous proves that girls aren't always afraid of snakes.

To Be A Winner

Her claim to fame was in fashion. This year Silwano Sikyala was placed fourth overall and first in the modeling category in the Maryland "Make It With Wool" contest. She earned this recognition by modeling an outfit she designed and made herself. Silwano discovered her flair for sewing four years ago at Eastern Jr. High and ever since then she has continued improving her talent by taking sewing classes at Blair and working outside of school. Looking forward to a career in fashion she hopes to be accepted to the Philadelphia Institute of Fashion.

Silwano, a native of Zaire, has traveled to many countries and is working on perfecting her English - one of her four fluent languages. Silwano is also a member of the National Honor Society and has played on the girls' soccer team since tenth grade. She loves Blair, as she declared it was, "the only (high) school I want to graduate from."

The future holds more contests, and many more outfits made from the hands of this accomplished seamstress.

To be a winner, Silwano Sikyala had to design, sew, and model this wool outfit.

"I was with my boyfriend and we were kissing and his sister kept on coming in the room." - Kim Sampson

"Skipping school with Natalie Boyd and having Mr. Villani, Jackie Johnson, Dr. Curry, and Mr. Fleury drive by and wave." - Kiki Faour

"Chuck and Lonnie pulled down my underwear in the middle of the football field." - Greg Rudder

"Louis Holeman tripped me in B-building hallway and I almost fell in a trash can." - Jonell Scamahorn

I had on some slippery flat shoes and I fell on my butt. I was so busy telling my friend about my fall that I fell again." - Tracey Lee

"Dropping the baton while running a 440 relay." - Tony McCloud

"Mr. Basgier put a skeleton hand in my desk and I reached in, grabbed it, screamed at the top of my lungs, and ran out of the room." - LaTonia Watson

Boredom overcomes Chris Thorne. Mr. Basgier understands this problem, and with an evil grin on his face proceeds to solve it.

Making Tracks

For those of you who took a bus or walked to school, the idea of driving must have been great. You could leave for school at 7:40, go to McDonalds during lunch, peel out of the parking lot, and make all of the non-drivers jealous. But many were unaware of the problems posed to those who drove. Drivers had to deal with dead batteries, a full parking lot, flat tires, and most of all—an empty gas tank. The average student driver spent about $325.00 this school year on gas alone.

Blair's car population was as diverse as its student population. The cars ranged from a beat up VW Dasher to a Mercedes Benz. A few people even rode motorcycles. The most common cars were Rabbits and Horizons. There were muscle cars too, for instance, a '69 Chevelle.

Blair students were on the road again, making tracks in the pursuit of happiness.

A Fond Farewell

Bidding adieu to Montgomery Blair, the tears well up in my eyes as I reflect on the past four carefree years. The old friends, the smiling teachers, the good times, the high pressure class rankings, the ulcer creating SAT cramming, the politicized nature of everyday school procedures.

But that's the past. The future remains. It's time to capitalize on high school's invaluable lessons. It's sink or swim time and Blair has handed you the life boat. Now they can sit back and see if your boat springs a leak, hits an iceberg, or fails even to leave port. The future is yours.

As evidenced by the above story, David Baronov is quite an accomplished writer. Here he looks for inspiration in outdoor scenery.

Full Speed Ahead

Runners: on your mark, get set, go! He leaped from the starting block and established an even pace. Approaching his fourth lap he was in the lead. There was no one for yards when he reached the finish line. Lance Fletcher was the 1983 State Champion in the mile race, and he was voted Athlete of the Year!

Lance began running at the age of thirteen with the inspiration of his father. His father not only coached Lance but also told him to strive to be the best. "He used to run with me, now he rides his bike with me while I run," explained Lance. The Howard County Striders, the Silver Spring Track Club, and Francis Scott Key Jr. High were the organizations where Lance started his career in track. The 1500, 800, mile, and the quarter were the events in which Lance excelled.

Since attending Blair in tenth grade, Lance has participated in all sorts of track teams-Indoor and Outdoor Track and Cross Country. He plans to continue to compete in track at college. His hopes include attending Delaware State and the 1988 Olympics. To account for his phenomenal success Lance explained, "I couldn't do it without my Pops."

Not deterred by the wintry weather, Lance Fletcher faithfully finishes his laps.

The Smart Stuff

He looked like the "All American Kid"—the casual stride, the shy smile, and the dry wit made Bryce Diamant so distinctive. Who would have thought the senior who spent his weekends cheering on the Redskins and playing baseball would also be this year's valedictorian?

Although his impressive 3.97 GPA was due to hard work, Bryce was the kind of person who didn't limit himself to only one interest. Besides being an exceptional student, he was an active member of Blair's baseball team and played soccer for both Blair and the M.S.I. League.

Although many students set out with the intent of being valedictorian, this was not Bryce's original goal. "I always tried to get A's because it meant I was learning as much as I possibly could." Bryce admits being valedictorian didn't enter his mind until his junior year when his friends prodded him about possibly achieving the high honor.

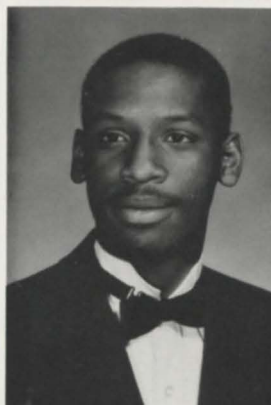

"I think the reason I wanted it the way I did was because it made colleges stop and take notice."

After college, our valedictorian planned to work towards his PhD and become involved in setting up space colonies. When asked his lifelong goal, he broke into a hearty grin and replied "I'd like to have my name in the history books!" It was obvious he had already earned a place in Blair's.

This is a student who knows where he's going! Bryce Diamant, Blair's Valedictorian, has left a record to be proud of.

Upward Bound

The Mountain
It's clouded peak
a bone chilling goal.
Though it was hard work
we climbed higher and higher.
Treading over treacherous paths
We supported each other to survive Pressing onward-defying odds, finally we pierced the sky. Standing on the summit the end of our four year expedition, we turned to face our new frontiers. Accompanied by the memories of times past, we prepared for the next challenge: A higher mountain, a harder journey, but an even sweeter success.

For Derrick Tyler, Ronald Roy, and Darryl Turner, hiking boots might serve to climb cliffs, but for now tramping up to Ertter's is just fine.

Friends

Look at my face dear friend. Could you see how much I missed you already? Once this year was completed I was supposed to be prepared to function in our world, but all I felt ready for was a warm bed with a comfy blanket. How I wished I could go back to the secure feeling of familiar friends. I could not hide from the fact that it was time to leave - time to venture to new horizons (as our elders would say). "Right here I have friends and a fine life," I protested. "So why should I change?" It seemed as though the system was set up to torture me. I'm allotted three wonderful years then off I go into the cold world.

I solemnly swore to keep in touch, but I knew it could never be quite the same. In my sadness, I did not consider that the change might be an improvement. Ahead of me lay the challenges of new jobs and schools, as well as the joys of meeting new friends and discovering new ideas. I would move forward, bringing with me pieces of the past.

Look at my face dearest friend, You will always be with me. Putting the mirror back in my suitcase, I realized the closest friend I could ever have was myself.

Friends forever. For five years Rosanne Mencher, Katie Dunne, and Kristin Shenk, have been close companions and hope to stay that way for years to come.

Karen Georgiev, with her great sense of humor and energetic personality, was the kind of person you enjoyed being around. It was easy to forget that she had limited vision and the need for a special machine in order to read or write.

In Karen's two years at Blair she left an outstanding record, by taking challenging courses that many students wouldn't attempt, and becoming a member of the National Honor Society. Karen really liked Blair, and said that the students and teachers here were "wonderful."

When asked what problems she has had living with her disability, Karen explained two of the most difficult ones. First, what would take most of us one hour to read or write would take Karen three. Another problem was the struggle to get her peers and teachers to realize that she was a real person, not someone to be pitied or given special treatment.

Karen's future plans were to go to college, and major in political science, with a minor in History or German. Her career interests included working in an embassy or a government agency such as the CIA. Another goal she has is to eventually run for public office.

Just talking to Karen convinced you that she could do what ever she set out to do, so it won't be surprising to see Karen's name in the headlines sometime in the future.

Using a machine to magnify the words, Karen Georgiev is able to read even with a sight disability.

No Going

Afghanistan. A world away from our own. It was a foreign land full of tales of Russian attacks and guerrilla warfare. We tended to forget that real people lived there and that some were forced to leave for a more stable life.

When he left the country Aziz Raad knew "for me [there was] no going back." That was close to two and a half years ago. Since then, he has improved his English and futhered his education at Blair. Later he began earning money at the local Silver Spring McDonald's. Obviously he has adapted to the American culture, but it was not easy. Equipped with a sense of humour, Azia made his way in his new home. His next challenge was to become an electrical engineer while still finding time to enjoy painting.

In the transition from one land to another, Aziz Raad survived.

Dabbing on the paint, Aziz Raad carefully completes his painting.

The Price We Pay

How much would you pay for nine months of studying, listening, playing, getting homework, reading, thinking, shouting, running, writing, and laughing? All these activities were available at your local high school, between the hours of 7:45 and 2:15 p.m., five days a week, 180 days a year. Our senior year was priceless, but before receiving a diploma we paid a certain cost. Several items were necessary to every senior.

Average Senior Price List

1. Homecoming	$4.0
2. Involvement Ticket	$30.0
3. Senior Pictures	$60.0
4. Combination Lock	$3.0
5. Tape to stick pictures in the locker	.2
6. Class Ring	$84.0
7. "I Love Blazers" Painters Cap	$2.5
8. Tickets to shows	$9.0
9. School Supplies	$20.0
10. Money lost in the Coke machine	$2.5

Senior Memories

For all those years, we waited for someone to ask us what we thought and felt about school. We were always ready and willing to offer our opinions on teachers, kids, classes and activities. But no one ever asked us! Finally, Silverlogue offered some seniors the chance to reflect on their last year at Blair. 'What will you always remember about your Senior year at Blair?' was the question. Here are some of their replies.

"The relaxed pace of my senior year."

-Sean McKenzie

"Ummm..."

-Chris Thorne

"Mr. T., Mondays, and Babycakes."

-Jon Persons

"Screwing around, and playing pool!"

-Carl Philpott

"Going to the Regionals with the Soccer team."

-Rob Lill

"Jimmy"

-Terri Gala

"Getting my applications in for college."

-Leslie Schipani

"Wendy"

-Neil Pollner

"Making the Breaks, paying my dues, and Andrea Goodman."

-Darrell Griffith

"Trying to carry that red physics book without breaking my arm."

-Jan Gray

"Counting the days till Graduation."

-Rose Province

"Cast parties, movies, Mondays, Carebears, SSB."

-Lisa Feldman

"Renewing friendships (I transferred to Blair)."

-Katie Dunne

"Deciding where to go to college."

-Kristen Shenk

"Big fun."

-Mark Keating

"Finally being able to say, 'I'm a senior!'"

-Sandy Joyce

"Hugging Lisa and trying to get Marie to marry me!"

-Marc Downie

"All of my friends."

-Allan Collins

"My teachers, and oral reports."

-Van Pham

"Lisa Harvey's parties."

-Karen Faour

"Hard to make good grades."

-Chat Ewing

"Living at Jan Gray's House."

-Molly Gross

"Losing the poms' music at the games during the routines."

-Kiki Faour

"The closeness among us, and all the good times."

-Joan Stuart

"The way everyone got along so well."

-Beth Ragsdale

"All of my parties."

-Lisa Harvey

"The mad dash to get everything done."

-Ursula Marcum

"The close relationships."

-Mary Kafes

"Homecoming."

-Reggie Clark

"The people I love so much."

-Vivian Hsia

"Basketball season."

-Jonell Scamahorn

"Saying goodbye to all of my friends."

-Louis Hoelman

"Getting accepted to college and friends I made at Blair."

-Jack Benson

"The weekends."

-Donna Ramroop

"Meeting deadlines."

-Rosanne Mencher

"Graduation Day."

UNDERCLASSMEN

Relax And Enjoy It

Senior 1: "Have you seen the new ninth and tenth graders?"

Senior 2: "Yeah! Were we really like that back then?"

Senior 1: "Are you suggesting that at one time we were actually (he shudders) not seniors?"

Senior 3: "I hate to break it to you, stupid, but once upon a time we were in first grade too!"

Senior 2: "You're right. I guess I kind of miss those good ol' days."

It seemed that the seniors got all the lucky breaks. They got a wider variety of choices for their classes, they were honored more than any other class simply because it was their last year, and best of all, they got an early start on summer vacation.

But look at what they faced. They had to worry about choosing a college and filling out forms, or at least they had to find employment if they weren't attending a school. And then look at what happened after summer; they didn't get to come back next year. The seniors suddenly became nobody or only little freshman on a campus. Many of their friends they had to part with, too. Sure, they got to create some new "good ol' days", but they also had to take on some difficult responsibilities.

So the underclassmen suddenly realized that while they could still look forward to the good points of being a senior, they could also relax and enjoy the freedom of being an underclassmen.

These students show their Blair charisma.

Smiling, Freshman Camille Masse goes over her assignment.

The cafeteria is one of the places where students enjoy eating and socializing.

Is this Blair's new first string? No, this is just a bunch of spirited juniors supporting the football team at the Homecoming pep-rally.

These three underclassmen, Kim Moats, Ginger Frost and Caroline Venables show their school spirit by attending a football game.

The cafeteria is not the only place where students may eat their lunch. Some students like Juniors Carla Grant and Grayce Edmonds enjoy their lunch on F-building porch.

Almost There

Our junior year of high school brought on many new and exciting challenges, including responsibility. Learning to drive without running over too many pedestrians, keeping up grades while hitting every party in town, drowning in pamphlets and catalogues to choose the right college, and just the allover responsibility of keeping together, all became important factors during the junior year. Pulling through with flying colors, next year's senior class will surely be ready for whatever Blair has to offer.

Leaders Of The Pack

The Junior Class officers this year consisted of four highly concerned and devoted Juniors committed to make the Class of '85 the best. They accomplished almost all of their goals. Karen Bland as president, Stephanie Norris as vice president, Joy Blakeney as secretary, and Rhea Brookins as treasurer succeeded in winning first place for the Homecoming spirit hall with the help of many other spirited juniors. They raised almost one thousand dollars for the junior class by selling items such as pom poms and spirit buttons. They also held an outstanding coffee house which itself raised over $400. This money was intended to help reduce the price of the senior class of '85's trip to New York City. The officers also organized news bulletins that were sent to staff and students to keep the junior class informed about activities and frequent meetings. All in all, they pulled together the junior class, uniting it into one family. They worked hard to make the class of '85 a winning one.

Being voted as Junior class officers is good for one's ego, yet when there is work to do, these girls are sure to tackle it. The lucky ones this year were; Rhea Brookins, Joy Blakeney, Karen Bland, and Stephanie Norris.

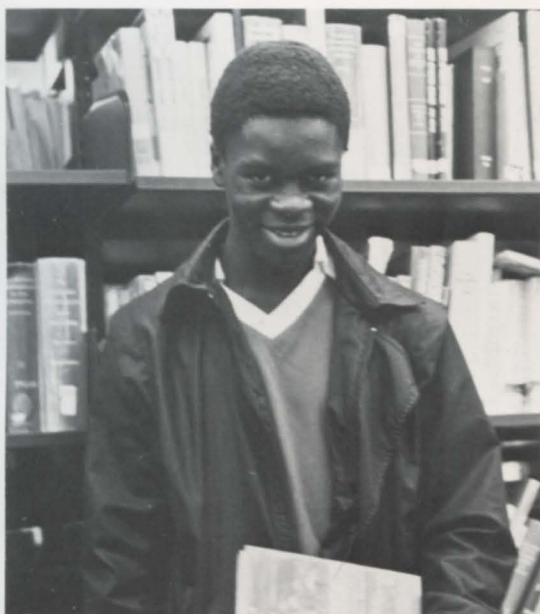

Kicking Towards A Goal

Blair's soccer team started out their season feeling very confident. They had every right to be with such an outstanding player as Junior Kaituta Sikyala, Blair's star center forward, on their side. Kaituta started playing soccer when he was about eight years old. He first became interested in soccer in Zaire, Africa, where it is a very popular sport.

Kaituta does not expect to play professional soccer, but he would like to continue playing throughout his college years.

Kaituta, was eighth in the state for points made. He was also an all-state and all-South player, getting more votes than anyone else in the state of Maryland.

Blair should feel proud to have such a skilled player as Junior Kaituta Sikyala who used his talents to lead the Blazers on to victory.

Blair's star soccer player, Kaituta Sikyala, displays a bright confident smile.

Individuality

This year there was a small group of people who really stood out. Jordan Rode and his friends were unique in the school; they were punk. Jordan first decided to be different, when one morning he woke up and started to worry about what he should wear to fit in with a certain group. At that time, punk was not as popular or well known as it is now.

Jordan didn't judge people. He liked politeness and courtesy, and caring for people. He respected people's rights, and hoped that they would do the same. He didn't like people to make him feel uncomfortable for the way he looked. When asked to give a brief definition of punk in general, he said, "Punk is anti-war, anti-racist, and definitely anti-status."

Tonight, new waver Jordan Rode, might decide whether to turn his hair yellow or blue, but today he is concentrating on his homework.

Spirit

Stuck in the middle. Not young fresh faces, not quite the top of the heap, Juniors gained recognition through their school spirit.

Effects of Junior spirit were never more evident than during Homecoming week. The main hall was decked with colorful red and white crepe-paper streamers arcing from the ceiling to the walls, which were covered with skillfully placed construction paper cut-outs. This enthusiastic effort won the Junior class $25.00 for their spirit hall. But the Juniors were not satisfied with their homecoming success. They also produced an excellent coffeehouse and were the first to cheer at games. All these efforts were supported by an active Student Government, largely dominated by Juniors.

The class of '85 might have been in the middle, chronologically, but they were tops in spirit.

After creating the most spirited wall for Homecoming this year, Karen Bland, Kyle McDowell, Ana Valencia, Lisa Mauchamer, Carolyn Weber, and Debbie Levin relax.

Growing Pains

Blair's sophomores of 1983-84 were full of pep and school spirit this year, perhaps more than years past. Their cheerfulness may be attributed to the fact that they had someone younger, like the freshmen, to pick on. More than likely, it was a positive attitude that kept their spirits high. Sophomores coming into Blair for the first time appreciated the greater amount of freedom in high school as opposed to junior high.

"Blair has more freedom and the teachers are nicer," says Erika Dotson.

Cris Nickels added, "Blair is bigger and more exciting. Blair has made me more sociable. I've made a lot of new friends and I'm having fun."

So here's to those "wise fools" I just wait 'til you're all juniors!

The Few The Proud The Sophomores

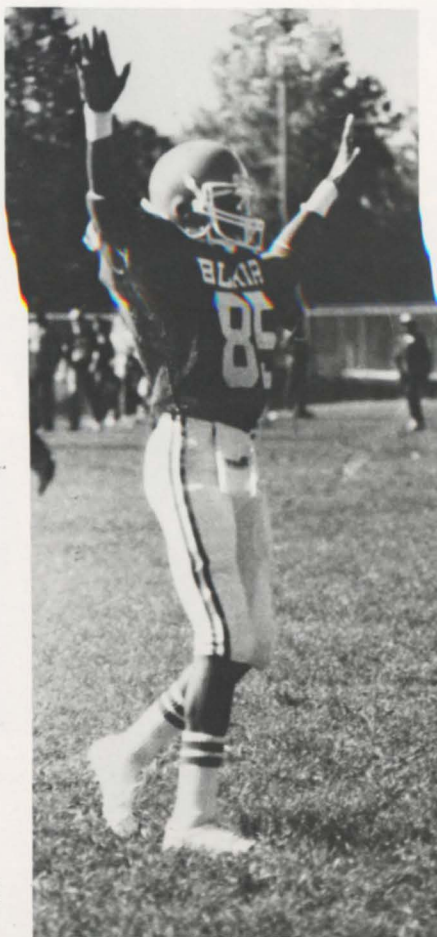

Going out for athletic teams was hard enough for anyone, but for a second year student, trying out for varsity was a very ambitious goal.

This year a few talented sophomores made the varsity teams. On the football field, Timmy Haynes, Chris Bratton, and John Fotopoulus contributed their full efforts. Haynes, a sure handed wide receiver, was especially noted this year for his speed.

The sole sophomore on the soccer field was Ricky Serano. "He is a good ball handler," said Coach Birmingham, "and should become even better with more experience."

Making varsity the first year out was difficult. These young men were the few, the proud, the sophomores.

Touchdown! Timmy Haynes, one of only four sophomores to make Blair's Varsity Football team, shows a sign of victory at Einstein last October.

Pacing, Perserverence And Practice

Whether pounding down the track or serving a ball over a net, sophomores proved their athletic worth this year. They were major contributors to the success of the varsity cross country and volleyball teams.

On the varsity cross country team, there were six sophomores: Shawn Flowers, Peter Thorne, Yvette Nguessan, Mwasito Sikgaea, John Williams, and Duncan Gilberto. The coach, Mr. Gouchnour said, "They have real potential and are very hard working. Right now they are competing against people who have three years experience and they find it challenging and tough." Having sophomores competing in varsity sports will give the team experienced players for the future. This year the runners learned the three p's: Pacing, Perseverence, and most of all Practice. Shawn Flowers, a sophomore, on the cross country team, enjoyed running for Blair. "It's a real challenge. But I know I can make it." Another sophomore, John Williams said, "It's . . . a lot of fun."

Ginny Assousa and Rachel Herndon were the varsity volleyball team's two sophomores this year. Rachel Herndon who was on the girls J.V. team last year said, "It's a lot of fun and we all get along really well. But we don't get much recognition. The only people who come out to watch are mainly our friends." Next year Rachel and other sophomores will boost the team, hopefully to receive more recognition.

Whether these sophomores were about to cross the finish line or spiking the ball they knew they were an important part of Blair's varsity team.

Looking for their names in the spotlight, Ricky Serrano, Benny Demouy, and José are skimming the Journal.

Blair Has Trust In You

Summer ended and everyone began purchasing crisp new paper, sharpening their pencils and putting away the suntan lotion.

Freshmen worried about more than their school supplies. Learning how to get around the six buildings of Blair, not being trampled by upperclassmen, and adjusting to the new instructors was just the beginning.

Some freshmen adapted easier than most, as Beth Martello said, "I like it a lot better (than junior high). There are a lot more nice people. Blair has . . . trust in you."

There's got to be a freshman in there somewhere!

Destination: Fun

This year at Blair, the freshman class officers worked harder than ever to make the class of '87 the best.

Freshman Class President, Kimberly Dorsey, set several small goals for the year, rather than attempting something unrealistic. One goal was to do things freshmen are normally excluded from. Another, to generally boost the freshman image and make the youngest element of Blair noticed. The class officers organized dances to raise money and set up their class trip.

"Well, we planned to have a lot of fun," stated Treasurer Brian Primack. Having fun was the main goal, next to surviving the rigors of being a freshman, with the only comforting thought of someday being a sophomore.

Fresh Attitudes

"Some of them are people, too."

"I really don't look up to them more than anyone else," said Tracy McKay.

"They're better than sophomores."

These were a few examples of how freshmen felt about upperclassmen and especially seniors. Through the years upperclassmen have made freshmen the butt of their jokes. But the class of '87 had something to say this year.

"Seniors are just like anyone else, but older," said Otto Orantes.

"The seniors rock. They're tall," offered Christina McGrath.

Freshmen class treasurer, Brian Primack meekly whispered, "I'm scared for my life to say anything."

Of course not everyone has been mistreated. One freshman said, "All the seniors I know, I like; They're nice."

Other Freshmen were unaware of the upperclassmen. When asked about them, one freshman responded, "Seniors? Who are they?"

"Honest Jackie, I have a pass." In between classes Freshman Christina McGrath is caught at her locker late once again.

FACULTY AND STAFF

Teachers Are People Too

As students, we rarely stopped to think about our teachers and why they were with us every day, trying desperately to knock into our heads some theorem, or law, or theme, to what seemed a worthless novel. In all fairness, however, we must realize that teachers are people who aren't too different from ourselves. Teachers have a life of their own, with all of its ups and downs, and they remember what it was like when they were kids.

Blair has many wonderful teachers. They cared about us and they were genuinely concerned about "where we go from here." We reflect three to four years of hard work they contributed to, guided us in, and at times pushed us through to become the young adults we are.

Listening closely to Mrs. Goodman's instructions is a must before starting to make paper jewelry.

Keeping the tempo, Band Leader Mr. Harry wants the timing to be correct to ensure another fantastic performance.

On a Saturday afternoon Mr. Villani puts his other duties aside and comes to cheer on Blair's football team.

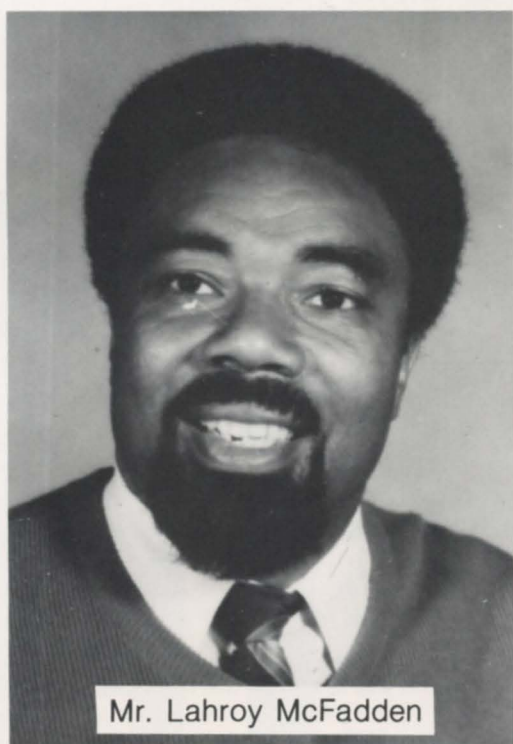

As a vice-principal Dr. Curry tries to keep in touch with the students.

Taking a break from advising and teaching, Mrs. Cutler and Mrs. Hoing probably are relieved to have a break from their hectic schedules.

Unique Backgrounds

Blair's administration this year was as diverse as its student body, with each member possessing a unique background. They included a college theatre director, an original faculty member of Mark Twain High School, a marine sergeant, and an all-state football star! Perhaps you can match the administrators with their histories.

Before becoming an administrator, this leader had been an English teacher here at Blair, and also had an interest in drama. Starting in high school, this "future administrator" participated in school plays, became a director in college, and then continued to act in community theatres after graduation.

Another administrator came to Blair after working in special education at Mark Twain High School, where he was one of the founding staff members. Following that experience, he assumed the challenge of working with the handicapped at Rock Terrace High School. This year he led the S.P.A.R.C. program at Blair, contributing patience and experience to the job.

A veteran of Blair's staff, Dr. Curry has found her place, for now.

One forceful but amiable leader has been at Blair for over twenty years, and has been an administrator for ten of them. After serving as a sergeant in the marines, this leader began her academic career as a business and typing teacher. Her most famous pupil was Jackie Onassis, whom she taught at George Washington University. She later advanced to the position of counselor and then head of the Guidance Department at Blair.

As an all-state football player in high school, another administrator secured a full scholarship to Hillsdale, and had a four-year semi-professional football career. This was before he settled down to a more academically oriented career as a Blair administrator.

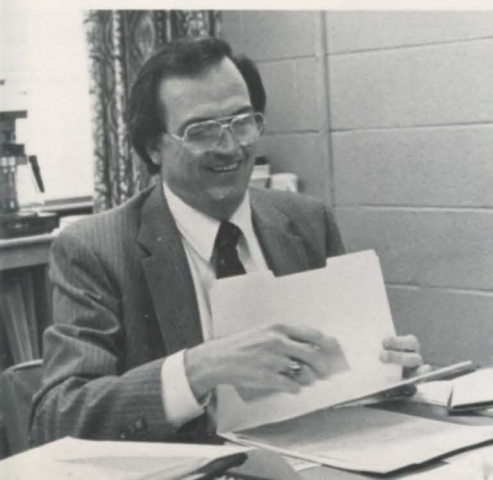

Although each administrator brought a unique background to his or her position, the four individuals were able to work together to make sure the daily business at Blair ran smoothly and effectively.

If you haven't already guessed, the administrators described are Mr. Joseph Villani, Mr. Donald Kress, Dr. Mary Curry, and Mr. Lahroy MacFadden, respectively.

Buried in the paper work of a new job, Mr. Kress grins and bears it.

Having asked an unusual favor of Seniors Vivian Hsia and Miles Davis, Mr. McFadden is answered with a burst of laughter.

Guidelines

It stood at the end of that pea-green hallway —just past the attendance office and the school store. It was the first stop for many in their journey through Blair; an information center that offered courses for each and every student's life. This stop was, of course, the Guidance Office. It was the place to return to after taking a wrong turn. There were experienced counselors there whose job it was to schedule new routes that would steer those who were lost, back on course. The Guidance Office was also a necessary final stop for all. It contained those very important transcripts required for admission to college as well as to many job-training courses. The Guidance Office was appropriately named, for it served as a well-informed guide to keep everyone on the right track.

Sail On

Yes, English teachers do have other activities besides correcting grammar. Mrs. Hoing is one English teacher whose rich life includes many interesting activities.

When asked about her favorite ways to spend free time, the answer was a surprise. Sailing! About five years ago she and her husband decided to embark on this new adventure. After a few sailing lessons, the Hoings bought a boat and explored the nearby Chesapeake Bay. Mrs. Hoing found a special quietness in the movement of the boat, as the sails and wind worked together. Although she loves sailing, Mrs. Hoing may soon be following other exciting interests. Maybe hangliding or waterskiing — who knows?

Advising students like Junior Julia Wison is one of Mrs. Hoings many duties.

"A Product Of The 60's"

Aside from skiing, backpacking, and breeding tropical fish, Mr. Moats, one of Blair's great science teachers, has a great interest in . . . teaching.

He describes himself as, "A product of the 60's," (he feels that) "From love we will find peace." During the 60's, Mr. Moats was just entering the independent adult world. He was faced with being forced into another world, one of war. "I had a choice. Either I give three years to the Marines, or three years to teaching." He decided, "I could serve the community better as a teacher than as a soldier." So Rick Moats, the sports fanatic, scuba diver, and world traveler, became Mr. Moats, the physics teacher. The more he became involved with his students, the more he believed that there was no more honorable profession.

Some time ago, Mr. Moats' theory on teaching was put to the test. A friend offered him a job guaranteeing a tremendous increase in salary with definite possibilities towards advancement. It didn't take long for Mr. Moats to make his decision. Money was nice, but " . . . being . . . really proud of what I was doing was (the) most important (thing)."

Enthusiastically teaching his class, Physics teacher Mr. Moats explains the affect of water displacement on mass.

Mitchell's Charge

Bringing a new sound to Blair, Mrs. Mitchell added her spirit to the music department. Even though her first year at Blair was a full time job, Mrs. Mitchell did not sacrifice her other interests. On nights when the Bullets or the Capitals played, she headed out to the Capital Centre, but not as a spectator. Her seat was behind the organ and her spirited music charged up the crowd. This job was not a passing fancy. Ten years ago, after seeing an ad in the paper, she applied. Subsequently, Mrs. Mitchell began sharing the position with another women, but after a short time, she was a solo act. Ever since then, Mrs. Mitchell has been playing "Charge!" for every winning score. When asked how she liked the job she simply replied, "I love it!"

In her spare time at school, Mrs. Mitchell practices for an upcoming game.

Dr. Calvin C. Rubens 1929-1983

Dr. Calvin Clinton Rubens was one of those rare individuals who could, in the words of senior Diana Haggerty, "make a gloomy Monday morning seem like a bright Friday afternoon." He came to Blair in 1959, at the beginning of the desegregation era, and a year later was named head of Blair's business department. Throughout his twenty-four years at Blair, he gained both the respect and admiration of those students and faculty members who worked with him. On October 12, Dr. Rubens' body was found in his Takoma Park apartment, where he had apparently been strangled. A few days later, faculty and students gathered in Blair's auditorium for a special memorial service to remember "the man who made a difference."

We miss you Doc, we miss your smiling face everyday in the cafeteria, we miss you calling and ordering special things and demanding that they be prepared in a special way. You brought a ray of sunshine to our days. The special treats you brought to us, that you had prepared, all served to brighten our days. You left a void that no else can fill. You were our favorite teacher; we'll always remember you. With love, —Barbara Jackson, cafeteria manager and co-workers: Mary Tarleton, Chrisitne Dillard, Rosa Lopez, Grace Molina, Elisa Pannell, Alice Page, Concepcion Warner, Carolyn Summers, Carment Laverde, Sophia Tucker, Sheila Henry.

He typed my graduate thesis for me, like he did all the others, and, as usual, he waited until the eleventh hour to pull an all-nighter and do the whole thing. At two O'clock in the morning he was typing away, watching an opera on his Beta Max, explaining the opera to me, talking on the telephone, and editing and making corrections on my thesis as he was going on. Apparently, this was his customary way of doing things. By sun-up, I was ready to take it to school.

—David Allen, art teacher

He understood life from every point of view. He was comfortable with the "haves" and "have-nots." I always marvelled at how he gave so much of himself to so many . . . he was a man of great dignity, compassion, and understanding . . . he was unselfish, caring and always late.

—Vincent Puglisi, Rockville High School teacher

I was shocked and saddened to read of Dr. Rubens' murder. I feel compelled to write of him . . . Dr. Rubens was a teacher who left a lasting impression on me. He was a rare combination. He inspired and encouraged me to be the best person I could be. I have always remembered Dr. Rubens with admiration and fondness.

—Sharon R. White, Class of 1960

To have known Calvin leaves a special joy in my memory; joy that comes to mind when I recall the many times he said "yes" when I asked him for help. The following verse from Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" expresses the mood and feeling I will always cherish, because it illustrates Calvin's philosophy and feeling towards all people.

"Twilight and evening fell
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark."

—Eula Powell, librarian

Anything he had, he would share with you. He was just that kind of person. You don't come by people like that often. He really was one in a million.

—Jackie Shropshire, Business teacher

Sitting on a shelf between the old video cassette player and the ripped T-shirts was a box marked 1983-84. Taking off the lid uncovered a year that buzzed with activity. At Blair we were well aware of the national and worldwide events taking place around us. It had been a year to remember - one surrounded by an aura of prediction and mystery. In 1948, George Orwell wrote the infamous novel 1984 about a land dominated and controlled by a "Big Brother;" a place with no freedom, and no creativity. 1984, his future, turned out to be full of fads, record setting music, and political debates, but no Big Brothers. Here are some of the many changes that have taken place.

Fads

Every child wanted to adopt a Cabbage Patch doll this Christmas.

Multicolored "Chucks" added a bright touch to any outfit.

"Oh what a feeling" swept the country with the movie Flashdance.

If you did not like the color of your hair you could have changed it to blue, pink or purple.

Twirling on your head in a fluid motion was one feature of Break Dancing.

The Mr. T. tough look - a mohawk and 23 pounds of gold jewelry.

By spiking their hair and wearing dog collars even some preppies joined the ever growing punk movement.

Life, liberty, and the pursuit of...trivia? Millions of people rushed to the nearest bookstore to pick up the latest game craze, Trivial Pursuits, before it was sold out.

Music

Michael Jackson's Thriller outsold all previous albums with hits like "Billie Jean" and "Beat It".

Patrolling the top of the charts, The Police made it big with Synchronicity.

Music videos were the newest way to express the story behind a song.

Flamboyant and colorful Boy George of the Culture Club started new trends in men's and women's clothing.

The Four Tops, the Temptations, Diana Ross, and many others reunited to celebrate twenty-five years of Motown.

Sophisticated synthesizers made space age sounding music possible for artists such as Herbie Hancock.

Politics

At 73, President Reagan became the oldest man to hold the executive office.

"I have a black, I have a woman, two Jews, and a cripple." This statement forced outspoken James Watt to retire from his position as Secretary of the Interior.

After less than 12 months in office Russian Premier Andropov died.

Three point eight million dollars were paid for 62 volumes of false Hitler diaries.

The deficit was the major problem for politicians in this election year.

Along The Way

The Marines invaded Grenada and were a "peace keeping" force in Lebanon.

The Korean airline 007 was shot down when it flew over Russian airspace.

1984 marked the twentieth anniversary of the tragic assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Jesse Jackson earned enough political clout to become the first black to be a serious contender in the Democratic primary elections.

Science

Up, up, and away. Sally Ride and Robert Bulford were the first woman and black to experience a space shuttle flight.

Home computers became increasingly popular, by being available at lower prices, and offering both practical uses and entertainment.

If you were not at home for a favorite show, you could conveniently save it on a video tape for later.

The futuristic Disney Epcot Center opened to the public.

The nation was shocked at the serious outbreak of the yet incurable A.I.D.S.

Blair began its first full-scale computer courses. This was possible through the addition of twenty brand new Apple computers.

Sports

The XIV Winter Olympics were held in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia while Los Angeles, CA. hosted the summer Games.

Our beloved Baltimore Orioles overcame the Phillies and won the World Series.

The Redskins made the Super Bowl once again, but unfortunately lost to the Los Angeles Raiders.

Trivia

The Chinese declared 1983-84 to be the year of the Rat!

America was forced to take a moment to perceive the harsh realities and the horrifying aspects of surviving a nuclear war when ABC aired "The Day After."

Vanessa Williams became the first black Miss America.

Twenty years ago, America was invaded and subsequently dominated by the Beatles.

Michele Wilson 1968-1983

Michele Wilson had been a student at Blair for four months. She was injured in a traffic accident on December 14, 1983. We lost Michele the next day.

Michele had been a very involved student in all of the schools she had attended. When at Takoma Park Junior High, she was a member of the soccer, basketball, and baseball teams. She was also a member of the National Junior Honor Society.

When she entered Blair, Michele became involved in the Marching Band and she continued to maintain the high standards in the academic performance for which she was known.

Michele had many friends and a family that loved her. We will remember her as they will, as a bright, talented and happy girl, who had lived her short life the best that she could have.

We, the 1983-84 Silverlogue Staff, would like to extend a big, happy smile to all of those patient and cooperative people who made possible the creation of our "masterpiece". All of our thanks goes to Mrs. Rogner and Mrs. Powell for the use of their typing facilities; to Mrs. Goldberg for her skillful handling of financial matters; to all the teachers whose classes we skipped in order to make deadlines; to Shelly Metro for all her support and for thinking of excuses for our late deadlines; to Potts and the staff down at Delma; to Bob Caddick of Segal/Majestic; to Mr. Villani for his encouragement and cooperation; to Jenny Barret for letting us use part of her work on Dr. Reuben's death; to Emily Gray and Alan Gross for understanding when their daughters were up till 2 A.M.; to the makers of Combos; and finally to Mrs. Goodman, for she was able to transform our ideas into reality by threatening to expose the true nature of her insane staff.

It Was Worth It.

1984 had been just one stretch of our long journey. But it was not an uneventful one by any means. There were many side trips, detours, and tire changes which made the trip exciting as well as difficult. This made it all the more worthwhile when we finally reached the finish line. There was plenty on the road ahead of us: uncertainty and anticipation, twists and turns as well as new directions.

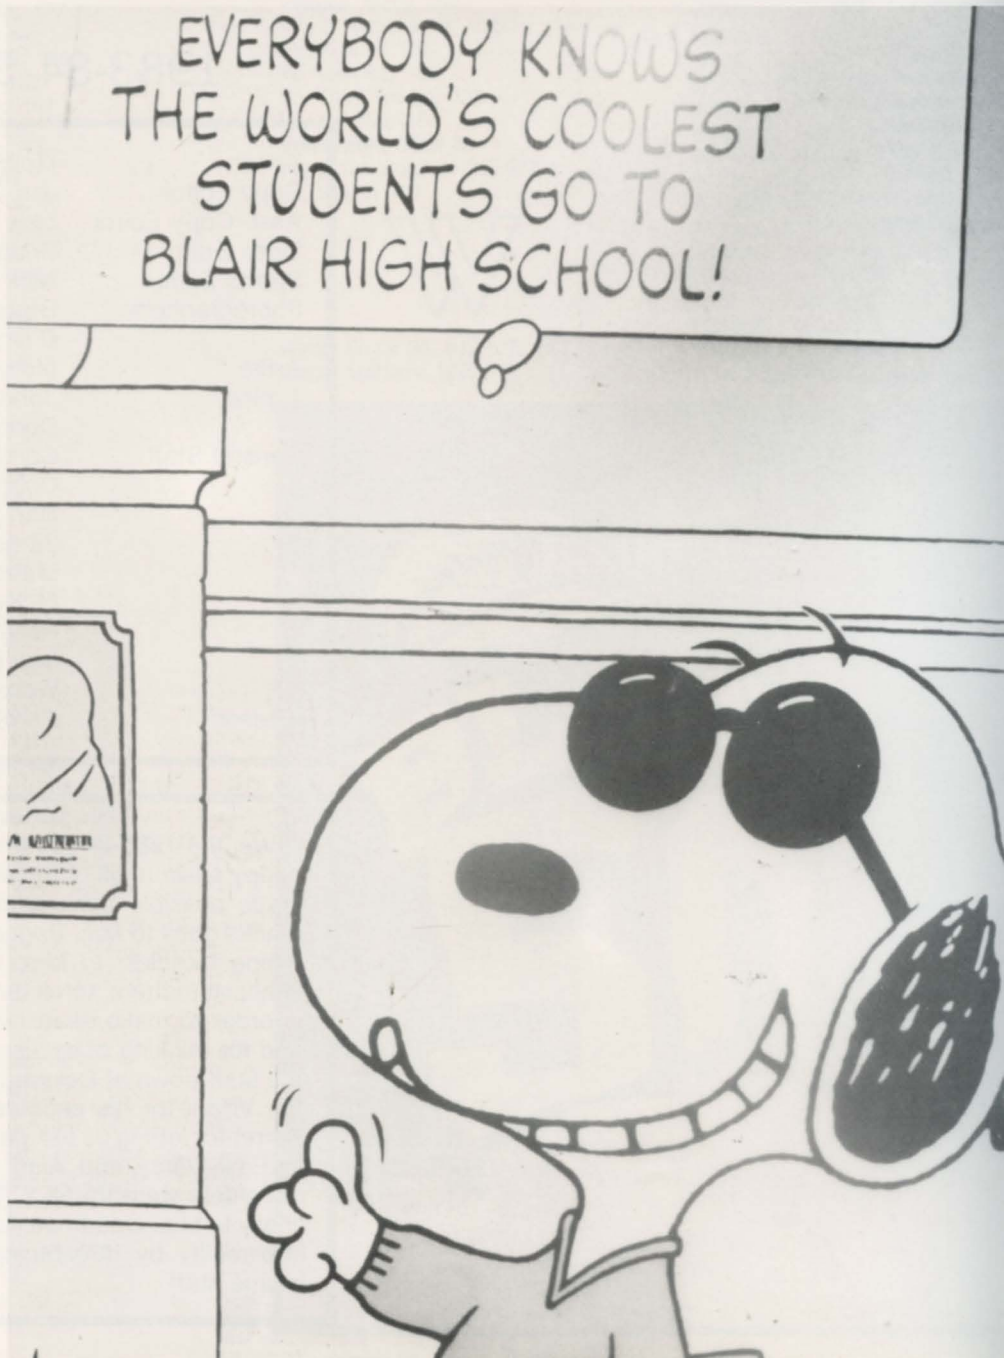

As we looked back we all reminisced about our trip, each remembering something different about where we had been: A cheer at a game, an "A" on a report, eating outside, a pep rally, a food fight, help from a teacher, or a hug from a friend. The year was over, but the memories would live in our hearts forever.

The library is a comfortable place for Paula McKnight, Shelley Washington, and Tawanda Sands to enjoy each other's company.

Frolicking in the hall after a long day are Seniors Damien Finley, Rhonda Johnson and Courtney Young.

Snoopy shows the pride that all Blazers feel.

Leaving school with hopes for a great weekend are Sandy Joyce, Chat Ewing, Kelly Bell, and Tom Lee.

Curious to see what Miranda Harris thinks is so funny, Tink Wanning peers out the window while Carolyn Bloom explains the joke.

It's hard for Seniors to concentrate during second semester, but Rose Province shows it can be done!!

Exit '84

The 1983-84 school year had come to an end. For weeks we had been counting down the final days, eagerly awaiting the longed-for freedom. But at the same time, in the back of our minds, there was a tinge of regret. For we knew that there would be many whom we would never see again, people we had taken for granted like Old Reliable, whom we always copied from in Algebra, or the class clown that sat behind us in French. How would we have survived without them?

At Blair we had gone through so much: developing strong friendships, breaking up with boyfriends or girlfriends, passing tests, participating in after school activities, ploughing through piles of homework, and just living through the average hectic day. All of these factors contributed to our growth and maturity during what may have been the toughest years we would go through. For some the years were painful, for others, a barrel of laughs. But we will all look back upon the time spent here at Blair and smile, for among the many classroom hours were some of the best moments of our lives!
